Important Queries and Replies

What is the first duty of a man of family?
To secure the integrity of home and make a sure provision for those dependent upon him.

IN WHAT WAY CAN THIS BE DONE?

In no other way can this be so securely and effectually done, and the home be preserved in all its sweetness and beauty, as by acquiring a Policy in The Standard Life.
Countless families and homes are wrecked and made desolate yearly and thousands of children thrown into the great tide of poverty and vagrancy all through the careless improvisation and culpable neglect of the breadwinner.
Remember in time, that a policy in The Standard Life is a positive safeguard against the frowns of fortune, a sure protection for old age, the best and safest investment, a precious, in fact the only, infallible provision for the loved ones under your sacred care.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Representatives sat on Saturday, Dr. D. Veracierto was formally installed as Secretary of the Chamber. — Summary approval was given to the usual Bill prolonging the ordinary sessions to July 15. — Summary discussion was granted the Bill declaring July 4th a holiday in honor of the centenary of Garibaldi. The Bill met with strong opposition from the nationalists, but was eventually approved by 29 votes to 14. The Chamber was then counted out.

The Executive has signed and promulgated the Census Act, and the Regulating Decree is expected to appear very shortly. A contemporary states that the Census will probably not be taken until the end of the year, or perhaps early next year. In any case, the preparations will require some months.

Our contemporaries are still occupied with conjectures concerning the object of the secret session held by the Senate on Friday last. The general opinion is that it related to some diplomatic claim. Failing specific knowledge, they have agreed that it is not of much importance. Why there should be so much secrecy over an unimportant matter is another secret.

Publication has been made of the Report of the Finance Committee of the Representatives on the Bill for adding $1,000,000 to the capital of the Bank of the Republic. The Report is a short one, the Committee accepting and in great part repeating the arguments of the Executive Message. The following passage is of some interest:—"In its eleven years of existence, the Bank of the Republic has established its credit in the most satisfactory manner—its notes of both denominations (meaning major and minor) have circulated and circulate throughout the country without the least difficulty—founded in direct benefit of industries and commerce, it has responded to the purposes of its institution, not only efficiently assisting the development of operations of great individual importance, but also the smaller industries, namely those which do not spring directly from the efforts of capital, but which arise and expand by intelligent labor and perseverance, moulding themselves to their environment, and gaining progressive strength from the results of experience. In effect, the balance sheet of the Bank for April last shows that the Bank then had placed in current accounts and bills discounted the sum of $10,243,775, of which $3,861,456 was in loans not exceeding $2000 in each case, mostly in favor of the minor industries (farmers, agriculturists, etc.) of the country in general." The Report goes on to state that with the proposed increase of capital the Bank, in accordance with the terms of its Charter, will be able to issue notes to a total value of $15,816,500, namely $12,653,200 in major notes and $3,163,300 in minor notes ($5 and under). This amount the Committee regards as quite sufficient for the present necessities of the market, even after the gradual withdrawal of the notes of the Italian Bank. The Report also regards as justified the application of part of the Treasury surplus to this purpose. — The Report, we may remark, entirely overlooks one important part of the question; namely, that although fifteen or sixteen millions in notes may be sufficient paper currency to satisfy the needs of the market, the situation of the market is very different when all these notes are issued by one single Bank, and that a State Bank, to what it would be if they were issued various Banks, dividing the responsibility, and therefore minimising the danger in case of crisis. It is not merely the amount of circulating medium that has to be looked at, but also its security. Monetary crises still occur in even better regulated countries than Uruguay, and that the Bank of the Republic has passed soundly through eleven years of prosperity for itself, is no guarantee whatever that some day it will not be involved in a crisis, and then the entire paper currency of the Republic will be in danger. The official party, in our opinion, is committing a serious mistake in refusing to allow the question of monopoly or plurality of issues to be reopened, and the opportunity will soon be lost.

The Siglo states that the Budget for 1907-8 is in an advanced stage of preparation, and will probably be presented to the Chambers in the corner of next week. Whether this is done or not, prolongation of the present Budget, which expires on the 30th instant, is inevitable.

Electoral reform continues to be much talked about, despite the refusal of the officialist papers to give it further mention. That the subject will be reopened, is practically certain, though our contemporaries are quite unable to agree as to how or when. The period for civic inscription closed on Sunday, with the usual disappointing result—very likely due in great part to the non-appearance of electoral reform—and that may possibly reduce some of the reluctance on the part of the officialist faction, the connection requiring no explanation.

Irish Council Bill.

Text of Mr. Birrell's New Scheme.

London, May 12.

The text of the Bill to provide for the establishment and functions of an Administrative Council in Ireland was issued yesterday, and contains a few interesting conclusions which Mr. Birrell's explanations in the Commons did not disclose.

As Mr. Birrell explained, the proposed Council will consist of 82 elected and 24 nominated members, together with the Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant. An examination of the first Schedule to the Bill, which shows how the elected members are distributed amongst the borough and county constituencies, enables us to estimate the strength of the two parties in the Council. Taking the present Parliamentary representation as a basis—it is a good one—for forming an opinion, it is found that the Nationalists will number 64 members and the Unionists 18.

As the 24 nominated members are avowedly meant as a check on the majority, they must be reckoned with the Ulster minority, so that the strength of the two parties in the Council, approximately, will be 64 and 42 respectively, not counting the Under-Secretary.

Clergymen of all denominations will be ineligible for membership of the Council, either elected or nominated. This provision is indirectly to be found in the first clause of the Second Schedule, which says that Sub-section I of Section 94 of the Local Government Act (revised) 1898 applies to these members. The section of the Act of 1898, we find, reads:

"A person being in Holy Orders, or being a regular minister of any religious denomination, shall not be eligible as a County or District Councillor."

The text clears up a point or two in respect to the Chairmanship of Committees. When the first Council meets on the 14th of May next the chair will be taken by the Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant while the Council is electing a President, who, when elected, will take the chair.

While the Chairmen of the various Committees of the Council are to be nominated by the Lord Lieutenant, they must be members of the Council. Section 4 of Clause 16 reads:

"The Council may order the payment to the President of the Council and to the Chairmen of any Committees of the Council of such salaries as they think fit to assign in each case, and may order the payment to members of the Council of such sums on account of travelling and other expenses of attending the Council or any Committee thereof as they think fit."

It is provided in the Bill that the provision in the Agricultural and Technical Instruction Act of 1898 which enabled the Vice-President—Sir Horace Plunkett—to be a member of Parliament is to be repealed.

Laundry Marvels.

London, May 11.

The Agricultural Hall throws open its doors to-day to the washerwoman, professional and amateur. The first Laundry Trades Exhibition for five years is being held there, and all the marvels of shirt and collar dressing, flannel cleaning, and stocking washing are on show.

The idea of washing conjures up a mental vision to the simple-minded person of a brawny lady, wreathed in soap-suds, her arms bare to the elbow and beyond. A visit to the Agricultural Hall during the coming week will effectually erase any fancy picture of the days of Mantelin. In the whole extent of the exhibition a single wash tub of the good old-fashioned sort, no scrubbing board, no flat iron.

It is all machinery. Machines like radiators, and machines like cisterns, a machine that most resembles the rollers alongside a lock on the River Thames, a machine that looks like part of the "sinnies" of a gigantic motor car—all these and many others more easily recognisable, are shown as part of the enormous industry connected with the washing of the family dirty linen in private.

And all this machinery is really evidence on one side or the other in a terrible internal feud that has for years past been raging in the ranks of laundries. It concerns the dressing of shirts and collar. The respective merits of the reciprocating board, the steam-press and the hydraulic press for ironing and glazing these garments of civilization were all carefully explained to a press representative yesterday. Multiple roller mangle did their deadly worst with collars, shirt bosoms underwent all kinds of unpleasant treatment for his edification.

In a very prominent place in the Exhibition is a sewing machine depot. It is a hint that at first sight seems unkindly. One has always memories of laundries where sewing machines were not part of the internal economy. But nowadays it appears that sewing machines are not enough to satisfy the desire of the laundries to please his patrons. He also installs darning machines for ordinary fabrics, and darning machines for lace curtains. The extraordinary feature of this latter is that it repairs the curtain with the actual pattern that had been destroyed in tearing.

Drink and Food Fads.

A medical journal says that bread-and-butter days are returning, and that fads in drinks and foods are much less popular than they were five years ago. It claims that honest bread is, as good as patented, well-advised, specially-mixed foods at double the price. This is a rude jar for those of us who have been trying to improve our worn-out digestions with these fancy articles.

Another journal of authority warns us of the evils of boiled water—though the medical health officers all over Canada have been training the people to appreciate this luxury. This journal Cosmos, of Paris, declares that boiling water not only does not completely sterilise but also makes it unfit to drink, and that certain troubles of the stomach and intestines may be traced to its use. To boil water is to deprive it of its aeration and to make it heavy and indigestible. It should be sterilised by heat under pressure.

Modern science, with all its blatant trumpeting, comments the Canadian Courier, has thus got very little farther than our grandmothers' information. We are back to first principles again—fresh air and simple food.

There are some curious facts about our calendar. October always begins on the same day of the week as January, April as July, September as December. February, March, and November begin on the same days. May, June, and August always begin on different days from each other, and every other month in the year. The first and last days of the year are always the same. These rules do not apply to Leap-year.

As many as 20,000 cygnets are killed every year to be converted into the dainty powder-puff, to say nothing of the innumerable young birds of the elder duck and wild goose kind. The bulk of these are imported—the swans and geese from the islands of the Baltic, and from Norway and Sweden, and the elders from the northern and ice-bound seas.

Attempts have at times been made to "measure memory." One experiment consisted in reading a series of figures to the subject, and observing how many he could repeat without error in the order in which they were given. The faculty of concentrating attention is, of course, called into play in this experiment. Children from six to eight years old retain, on the average, five figures; children ten years old, six figures; and adults seven figures.

SUNDRIES.

—WEATHER.—Sunday was partially wet and entirely disagreeable. Yesterday remained dry but otherwise was not much better. Symptoms continue stormy and unsettled. Similar weather is reported from all parts of the Republic, but the rainfall has only been slight.

—URQUIZA THEATRE.—There was a large audience on Sunday when Sr. Salvini appeared as Othello, the part so closely associated with his father's name. We missed the wonderful touch of nobility and dignity which the elder Salvini imparted to the Moor in the first two Acts; but in all the remainder of the tragedy and especially in the great jealousy scenes of the 3rd Act. Sr. G. Salvini's performance can only be described as superb. Nothing could be finer than the manner in which he portrayed the gradual growth of jealousy under the devilish insinuations of Iago, and his acting was all the better for the absence of rant and unnecessary violence. Comparing the Othello of Sr. G. Salvini with that of two other Italian tragedians famous in the part, namely Novelli and Emmauani, we consider it nearer to the intention of Shakespeare, and certainly more consonant with English tradition. Anyhow, it was a great performance, and if it is repeated, we hope that the English-speaking community will not be so absent as was the case on Sunday. Sr. Salvini (who speaks English well) is a great admirer of Shakespeare and includes seven or eight of his plays in his repertory. We may add that Iago was also far better and more correctly acted than is generally the case on the Italian stage, where this part is generally completely misinterpreted. —This evening will be represented the classical tragedy "Edipo R.", from the Greek of Sophocles.

—POLITEAMA THEATRE.—This evening will be performed the evergreen favorite "Marina", followed by "El Guiltarrico."

—R. M. S. "THAMES".—This vessel is still grounded in the entrance to the port at Buenos Aires, and the cargo is being taken out of her as rapidly as possible to get her afloat again. It is hoped that she will be free to-day. —The "Cordillera", which was not in so bad a position, was got off and able to continue her voyage on Sunday.

—RACES.—On account of the rain, the races at Maroñas were suspended until Sunday next.

—DEATH AT SEA.—The captain of the "Holland Havas" has reported the death at sea, as results of an accident, on March 18, of the stoker J. Harris McGrath, English, aged 33.

LONDON NOTES.

SATURDAY, MAY 11.

The King, who was accompanied by other members of the Royal Family, yesterday afternoon received at Buckingham Palace the ladies of the Colonial Premiers' party, and such of the other members of the party as had not gone to Scotland.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. H. H. Lever's Old Age Pensions Bill was debated. The principle was accepted by the Government, and a hostile amendment was rejected by 232 to 19.

The text of Mr. Birrell's Irish Council Bill was issued yesterday. An examination of its clauses indicates that the new Council will contain 64 Nationalists, the non-Nationalist minority being 42. Clergymen cannot be members of the Council.

The Prime Minister yesterday fulfilled several engagements in Manchester before his return to London. In the morning he spoke at the Reform Club, referring to the magnitude of the tasks before the Liberal party, but anticipating that by dint of the loyal support the Ministry were receiving, and their steady adherence to the old principles of the party—especially that of free trade—they would prove equal to the occasion. Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman was next entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor at the Town-hall, and in response to the toast of his health, referred to the modern development of Manchester and to the increasing responsibilities of municipal bodies. He afterwards inspected military veterans in Albert-square, and paid a short visit to the Exchange.

Polling took place in Stepney yesterday to fill the vacancy in the Parliamentary representation caused by the retirement of Sir W. Evans-Gordon (U). The candidates were Mr. Leverton Harris (U) and Mr. Ben Cooper (L and Labor). Mr. Harris was returned, receiving 2,293 votes against 1,350 recorded for Mr. Cooper.

Prince Fushimi of Japan yesterday visited the City, where, at the Guildhall, he was presented with an address of welcome in a gold casket and made a courteous acknowledgment.

Last evening, a dinner in honour of Prince Fushimi was given by Sir E. Grey, the Foreign Secretary, who, in proposing the health of his Imperial Highness, dwelt on the admiration felt in this country for Japanese patriotism and public spirit, and described the object of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance as that of securing stability and peace. Prince Fushimi made a cordial reply.

It is officially announced that, at the close of Thursday's proceedings of the Conference, General Botha took leave of the members in a speech in which he said it had been one of the greatest pleasures of his life to meet the representatives of the other possessions of the Empire, and expressed his warm gratitude for the reception he had met with. Lord Elgin, on behalf of the Conference reciprocated General Botha's expressions.

In giving judgment in a case in which Miss Clara Pooles, a schoolmistress, sued the Kent Education Committee to recover salary in lieu of notice, Judge Woodfall said the defendants knew of the plaintiff's woes, and allowances ought to have been made for a lonely woman.

Remarkable disclosures were made yesterday in a case heard at Wood Green

Conclusiones del doctor Felipe Solari, Director del Instituto de Higiene de la Facultad de Medicina:

El resultado del análisis bacteriológico de la muestra de agua recogida por este Instituto en la fuente «Acqua Vera», sita en las Sierras del Verdum (Minas), ha demostrado que dicha agua es una agua muy pura del punto de vista bacteriológico. — Montevideo, Noviembre 15 de 1904. — Dr. Solari.

Análisis químicos

Conclusiones del doctor J. Scoseria, Experto químico de los Tribunales y Catedrático de Química biológica de la Facultad de Medicina:

Por los datos que anteceden, la muestra de agua remitida por el señor Enrique Alexander, merece ser clasificada higiénicamente como una agua muy pura, de excelente calidad. — Montevideo, Diciembre 29 de 1904. — Dr. José Scoseria.

Conclusiones de los profesores José G. Guglielmini y Víctor Coppetti, Catedráticos de Toxicología y de Materia Farmacéutica de la Facultad de Medicina:

De los datos que arroja el análisis, se desprende que el «Acqua Vera» de las Sierras del Verdum (Minas), por su absoluta pureza y su débil mineralización, reúne excelentes condiciones higiénicas como «agua para la alimentación» y sobre todo como agua de mesa. — Montevideo, Mayo 1.º de 1905 — Víctor Coppetti, José G. Guglielmini.

SHORT STORY

The Bishop's Quandary.

«Then,» I exclaimed, «sure, we will drink without it.» And I pushed over the flask.

The Bishop daintily filled his glass with his fat fingers, and we drank once more. His stomach merged over the table; it ranged collateral with the wine, and tickled me with the notion of some great vat beside the empty bottles. I shook with laughter, and the Bishop smiled genially. «Speaking as one gentleman of the road would to another, Ryder,» says he, «I declare I have never kept such disreputable company in my life.»

I have confessed the wine was rich and cordial; it flowed warmly through my veins, and set my head high and whirling like a weather-cock. And at this jest I fell to laughing louder, for the thrust appeared to me a piece of pretty wit. I smacked my thigh, and bellowed till the rheum ran over my eyes, and at last I pulled up and found the Bishop very quiet and fallen into a kind of abstraction. In my merry mood I took this ill; for a gentleman must needs complete a bargain to the end, and I hate your sour looks and solemn faces.

«Look'ee, my lord,» I cried, with some choler, «if 'tis my Lord Petersham that you are regretting, why have it out, and let us finish your thoughts aloud.»

The Bishop lifted his eyebrows with a faint expression of amusement.

«I vow, Ryder,» said he, «that I had clean forgot my Lord Petersham.»

«That is well,» I returned, dropping back into my chair.

«But,» he continued, thoughtfully, «in truth, now that you recall me to my duty, I must remember also that pleasure has an end.»

He rose, and I rose with him. «My lord,» I said, for I was all for a long night, «it would ill become me to press you from your duty, but if you will consider the night—»

«Ah, Ryder,» he interrupted, smiling graciously, «pray do not beset a poor sinner with temptations.» He stood before the fire, warming his legs. «This has been a pleasant encounter,» says he, «and now I will keep you to your promise.»

As he put it in that way, I had no more words against his purpose, and, so tied the score, we set forth again upon the horses, myself first upon Calypso. The night was still very bitter, but I, at least, was warm with wine, and I think the Bishop, too, was full enough for comfort. Yet the cold edge of the wind somewhat reduced my fervour, and where I was rolling three-parts-free in liquor ten minutes back, I was now mainly sobered and content of all my senses. I knew the land by rote, and we proceeded easily by lanes and windings, through a grievous slush of snow, until, at the end of half an hour, we came out on the ridge of the hill (I knew it of old) which lies in the rear of my Lord Petersham's castle.

At the cross-roads the Bishop reined in his horse and turned to me. «I think, Ryder,» said he, but courteously, «that we shall be well quit of each other here. I make a dull companion for youth, and you have doubtless a long ride before you.»

«Dull,» says I, «be damned! I'll wager upon you before all the bucks of town.»

The Bishop smiled. «So rich a testimony from yourself, Ryder,» he observed, «should go far to keep me in repute.»

«You may have it and welcome, my lord,» I answered. «And here,» I added, as a noise of wheels came up the hill «no doubt you will find some friends with whom I may leave you.»

I could hear the horses snorting and the heavy carriage creaking, as it strained slowly to the top.

«Ryder,» said the Bishop, after a pause, and looking at me quizzically, «I am like to eat worse dinners than to-night's, and to meet much poorer entertainment.»

At that moment the heads of the horses came popping over the rise. «Why, as for entertainment,» says I, jovially, for the Devil, somehow, took me all in a second, «'tis not all at an end, neither, I can promise you.» For the fancy caught me up of a sudden, and rapt me off in the maddest of whimsies; and as the carriage rolled out into the moonlight I beckoned the Bishop forward and rode up in his company. I was not two minutes over the business. There was the position imploring mercy on his knees, the woman shrieking, the gentleman himself wearing a stream of oaths, and my pistol through the window—the whole rare picture in a flash!

«Why, what is this?» stammered the Bishop in amazement. «What—why—»

— And his horse, backing and plunging under his clumsy handling, saved me the rest of his protest. But, seizing the bridle in my left hand, I forthwith brought his nose up to the window.

«Sir,» said I, politely, to the man in the coach, «the frost holds hard, and the snow lies heavy, and my friend and I, lacking purses of our own, must needs borrow of our neighbours to carry us to that excellent host, my Lord Petersham's. And as on this great occasion of the Lady Mary's marriage we should shrink shame to do things with a niggard hand, why, we are fain to dip deep into your pockets, I am sure,» says I, with a glance at the lady, «that this lamentable condition of my friend in particular, for I am of younger and more vigorous blood, will merit the tender consideration of the sex.»
