Important Queries and Replies

What is the first duty of a man of family?

To secure the integrity of his home and make a sure provision for those dependent upon him.

IN WHAT WAY CAN THIS BE DONE?

In no other way can this be so securely and effectually done, and the home be preserved in all its sweetness and beauty, as by acquiring a Policy in «The Standard Life.»

Countless families and homes are wrecked and made desolate yearly and thousands of children thrown into the great tide of poverty and vagrancy all through the careless improvision and culpable neglect of the bread-winner.

Remember in time, that a policy in «The Standard Life» is a positive safe-guard against the frowns of fortune, a sure protection for old age, the best and safest investment, a precious, in fact the only, infallible provision for the loved ones under your sacred care.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Senators sat on Wednesday. Leave of absence for 40 days was conceded to Senator Artagaveytia. Discussion was commenced of the Bill creating additional military forces. Sr. Alonso, after stating his disapproval of the Bill, said that he regarded discussion as futile after the lengthy debates in the other Chamber, and knowing that all present had already made up their minds on the point. He therefore confined himself to proposing that the voting should be nominal. This being conceded, the Bill was put to the vote, and was approved by 9 votes to 5. The other stages were rapidly passed through in the same manner, and the Bill declared finally sanctioned. Full approval was given without discussion to the Bill for return of duties on exported canvas flour bags, and for assistance to the sufferers by the explosion of the «Rivera.» The sitting then concluded.

The Bill creating additional military forces has already become Law by the promulgation of the Executive, which signed it the same evening, as if it were a measure of the greatest urgency and importance! The force created by the measure is the 5th Battalion of Chasseurs (which in reality has already been in existence for several months) with an annual estimate of $109,436, and also the Military Commandancy of the South of the Rio Negro with an annual estimate of $8,932. We understand that the appointment of Gen. J. Muñiz to the latter post is already signed.

In both Chambers, it will be noticed, the above measure has passed its final stages without any revival of the unpleasant contentions debates and recriminations that marked its first appearance. This is a smaller mercy for which we may be thankful, and at all events it shows a more conciliatory dipposition. And in both Chambers it was approved solely as a partisan measure by an exclusively partisan vote, a clear proof that it cannot be regarded as having been framed in public interests. As the Prensa very succinctly puts it, the argument that the measure is justified by confidence in the good use which the Government will make of it, is absurd, for the same agreement might be pleaded for investing the President with dictatorial powers, or any similar extreme step. Our own opinion as to the demerits of the measure remains unchanged, and we can only regret that a Government which shows so much good-will in many respects, should be so tactless in partisan question, The sanction of the Bill and the extraordinary haste shown by the Government in promulgating it—in sharp contrast to its dilatory action in matters of far greater public interest—have not made a happy impression. In fact, yesterday's Siglo found it necessary to devote half a column to the allaying of misgivings and uneasy rumors, concluding by warning the Government against being misled by the malicious representations of false friends, who in reality are its worst enemies as they are also the enemies of peace, order and a conciliatory policy.

As might have been expected, the very inopportune and ill-judged open political letter of Dr. Juan Gil, referred to in our last, has had the effect of creating a good deal of ill-feeling, and has already provoked some sharp and angry replies, whilst it is said that it will also produce a counter-blast from the nationalist majority which he unsparingly attacks. This will not tend to improve the situation, but we suppose it will soon blow over. This unhappy itch for reviving old sores seems to be a common failing in this part of the world. For the matter of that, we may point out that to this very day the whole political life of the country is still swayed and governed by the contentions and struggles of half a century ago; and barely adolescent young men find motive for quarrels and even for civil war in the rivalries of Rivera, Oribe and other chieftains of two generations ago. The maxim, not merely useful but essential for political progress, «Let the dead past bury its dead» seems unknown. Perhaps it has not yet been translated into the Uruguayan language.

THE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

In view of the Government proposal to exact a heavy guarantee from all foreign Insurance Companies, the latter have appointed a Committee of five Delegates, which has already approached the Finance Committee of the Representatives (to which the proposal has already been referred) with a view to securing a better understanding and more deliberate discussion of the step.

Referring to the above, yesterday's Siglo puts forwards some sound remarks. Without conceding that the necessity for any guarantee has been proved, it points out that the guarantee now proposed is excessive, and in fact much heavier than that exacted in Argentina, where the commercial movement is at least six times greater than in Uruguay. It is also very much heavier than in Brasil, Mexico, Italy and Spain. It also points out that the moment for such an exaction is inopportune, for in recent years the Insurance Companies have had a bad time in this country, and in fact have paid much heavier claims than they have collected premiums, so that the pretended exportation of gold attributed to the Companies is merely a myth. Finally;—«In the endeavour to protect native Companies it should be borne in mind that insurance represents a very powerful instrument of credit, indispensable to commerce, and that no part of the world has been able to dispense with foreign Companies. This economic fact has been so well understood both in England and in France [we think the Siglo might have added the United States] that these two nations, where there exist the strongest Insurance Companies in the world, do not exact any guarantee from foreign fire and marine Companies, and this freedom has not yet produced any complaint from the home Companies, which, on the contrary, are well pleased at the assistance of their colleagues for the division of risks. It would be desirable for the Finance Committee to study these points, so as not to approve with an unjustified haste a scheme the importance and extent of which cannot be denied. The matter deserves to be studied carefully, and indeed ought to be the object of a special law.»

The Telegrafo Maritimo of Wednesday evening also has some sensible editorial remarks on the some subject, advising the Chambers to act with prudence, deliberation and moderation, and, above all, to give the Companies an opportunity of defending and representing their interests.

HOW TO MAKE AN IMPERIAL RACE.

FRESH AIR AND EDUCATION.

Sir John Gorst, M.P., attended the Technical School, Halifax, on Tuesday, Sept. 29, for the purpose of distributing prizes.

Sir John said he did not know that there had ever been a time in the recent history of our country when it was more imperatively necessary for the people seriously to consider the bringing up of the rising generation than it was at this moment, because we were living in days when the British people had formed aspirations after empire. He did not know that there was anything to be ashamed of in a desire on the part of a people to occupy in the world a position of preminence provided that the ideal which they set before themselves was a noble one, and provided that they sought to attain their ends by self-improvement, and not by injuring and destroying their neighbours. (Cheers.) Now, if we desired that the British people in time to come should be an Imperial people the most essential thing was that we should breed a great Imperial race. It was a common-place thing to say, and yet how little was it considered that it was the generation now in the schools which would determine the character of our people and our position as a nation thirty or forty years hence. The first essential in breeding a great Imperial race was to have regard to the health of the children. The recent case of the Edinburgh elementary schools showed that the worse housed children exhibited the greater percentage of disease; but it was not only homes that were defective. He was sorry to say that there were often found in the country defective schools managed by intelligent managers and instructed by intelligent teachers. Hygiene was unquestionably one of the most necessary branches of knowledge for teachers, and he hoped that at least the new authorities would investigate the character of the air in the schools which children were compelled by law to attend. There was an inquiry some time ago at Owens College into the condition of the elementary schools of Manchester and Salford, and not one single school was found in which the air was thought what it ought to be. This was really quite inexcusable, because air was free, and the Guardians could not say it was a waste of the ratepayers' money to let fresh air into the schools. (Laughter.) Providence had placed oxygen in the air, and there was no excuse for preventing children from breathing that which was necessary for their proper development and nutrition.

Ten days ago he was in a village built by the Messrs. Cadbury, near Birmingham. There was everything in that village that any soul could desire — except a public-house. (Laughter.) There was one public-house, but there was nothing to be procured there more intoxicating than tea and coffee. (Renewed laughter.) He was struck with the healthy appearance of the children, and he reflected how different would their conditions have been had their parents been living in Birmingham slums and they themselves been playing in Birmingham gutters. (Cheers.) This was one of the most important questions of the day; he ventured to say it was even more important than the tariff question—(laughter)—if they really cared for the welfare of the people. He had given them one practical suggestion, and he now offered another. Why should not the children in our schools have a periodical examination by a doctor? (Cheers.) It was done in Manchester and Salford; to a great extent in London; it was done in Liverpool and even in Cairo, a city in a Mohammedan Arab country under the tutelage of our officials. The effect of it was excellent, and if generally adopted the money spent on periodical medical examination would be economically well spent. (Cheers.)

Our technical schools were of comparatively modern growth, and we had a great deal of leeway to make up. They had had technical schools in those countries of whose competition we are now so afraid much longer than such institutions had existed here. There were excellent technical schools in Germany, France, Switzerland, most of the countries of the Continent, and in the United States of America, which country was looked upon, perhaps, as our greatest commercial rival. The great weakness of our own technical schools was not that the buildings were not extremely good and fit to compare with those abroad; the weakness was not in the teachers, it was not in defective apparatus. The great defect in every one of our technical schools was that the students came ill-prepared for the instruction they were to receive. (Cheers.) He was told the other day by a very competent authority, the head of a very important branch of a great technical school, that he had among his students a considerable sprinkling of foreigners, and that he was obliged to say the foreigners took away from the school more than the British students generally did, because they had learnt the elements in the primary and secondary schools; so that when they came into the technical instruction they were able to devote themselves to the really technical work and had not to learn for the first time what they ought to have acquired in the primary and in the secondary schools. The only remedy for that state of things, said Sir John, was to improve, first of all, our elementary, and then our secondary schools. (Cheers.)

Some School Queries.

The school holidays being over, the moment seems an opportune one for inviting the over-worked parent, who for the last seven weeks has scarcely been able to call his soul his own, to employ part of the three months of liberty which lies before him in reflecting upon his duties to his boys. Boys have, of course, for all of us their educational value. They provide us (while they are with us) with constant opportunities of exercising ourselves in unselfishness and self-control. They are also a capital nerve-tonic, and they certainly do their best to keep us alive. Are we, so to speak, fulfilling our part of the contract? Are you satisfied, messieurs et dames, with the present condition of the time-honoured and time-worn institutions which take the care of them off your hands for three parts of the year? Are you getting what you pay for? Because, after all, you do pay for it, in good round sums. Are you content with what they are taught, and the way in which they are taught? Or do you mean to go on paying still larger sums to crammers for doing what in many cases the schools leave undone? Another question. Do you think that they are properly fed? Do you approve of the system which turns house-tutors into hotel keepers? If you have any doubts on the subject, go and see, and taste for yourselves. Get your boy's tutor to ask you to sit down to a meal with the boys, and find out whether it is his own habit to share their food, and whether he allows butler's extras. Finally, do you think that the masters live enough with the boys, as much, say, as you yourselves do in the holidays?.... Or are they, from the time when they go to bed till they get up, and at all times when they are indoors and not working, practically left to their own devices? These are simple questions, and, as far as any concerted action amongst parents is concerned, are apparently regarded as being of no importance. But—are they?—Onlooker,

There has been a sensational fall in the stock of the Steel Trust, and several of the directors are said to be hard hit. But it is thought unlikely that a Mansion House Fund will be started to help them.

Major General Sir Charles Egerton, who is conducting operations in Somaliland, has been appointed to the command of the forces in Bombay. The General still hopes to be able to run over to Somaliland every Friday to Monday to look after the war.

It is said that the servant difficulty is gradually being solved by the introduction of foreigners. We learn from an article on the subject that «The men-servants are more amenable than the female. They do not object to undertaking a little washing.» This certainly disposes, partially, of a great objection to the alien.

Several illustrated papers which not so long ago published a portrait of the Secretary of State for the Colonies now issue a portrait of the ex-Secretary of State for the Colonies. There is an extraordinary likeness between them.

Owing to the misunderstanding with Mr. Bourchier, there has been no notice in the Times of the new play at the Garrick Theatre. It will be interesting to see whether the Times will break «The Golden Silence.»

«Popular» English.

English prose literature has become in our day almost as rare as English poetry. A host of writers, more or less conspicious, have conspired, it would seem, to write, not English prose, but prose run mad. English in the hands of the most popular writers is now a language without rule and often without sense; indeed, the more popular a writer is the madder his prose becomes. It were invidious to give examples, for it is characteristic of the English novel that apart from every other form of literature it alone is indifferent to words, concerning itself chiefly with a tale of love, or the domestic accidents of provincial family life, or the impossible achievements of some braggart long and long ago. But when we remember the magnificent work of the translators of the Bible, how they dealt with romance immortally, and delicately set their words in order, or how in reading the Morte d'Arthur we are possessed by the beauty of a page that tells so exquisitely the valiant old tale, it is with utter disgust that we return to the work of the day, with its split infinitives, its use of «like» for «as,» its eternal «and which,» its horrible tautology and alliteration, its absence of rhythm or any sense of music, its domesticity and its vulgarity. To read the opening sentence of Hooker's «Ecclesiastical Polity,» that captures the reader by its sheer beauty from the very beginning, and then to read the work of the writers of our day is, as it were, to experience a revolution in manners, and in the language so tremendous as to startle even the most artless reader.—Edward H. Hutton; in the Monthly Review.

SUNDRIES.

—WEATHER.—This continues warm, heavy and threatening, without developing into rain or a storm. In the interior it is variable and unsettled, stormy conditions are reported from Canelones, San José, Durazno and Paysandu.

— PROMOTION. — The numerous friends of Mr. Jas. Fraser, for some ten years accountant of the Montevideo Waterworks Company here, may congratulate him on having been promoted to the post of sub-manager in the same concern.

—DENTIST RETURNED.—After an absence of some three months, the well-known American dentist Mr. J. S. Burnett has definitely returned to this city, and will be happy to see his clients at his consulting rooms Calle Sarandi 300 (facing the English Club).

—TAXES ON FOOD. — A meeting was held on Wednesday evening attended by the delegates of the grocers, bakers, butchers, greengrocers, hawkers, and other dealers in fresh provisions, and also of the publicans and market-gardeners. The idea of organising a general public manifestation against the excessive Municipal imports and restrictions on the sale of fresh provisions was discussed and generally approved, but before carrying it into effect it was resolved to await certain developments, including the reply of the Municipality to some of the protests recently presented.

—PRIZE.—At the Mercedes Agricultural Show, just being held, Messrs. Wilson Brothers are presenting the «Premio Buchanan» (in remembrance of the famous Buchanan dip for which they are agents) for the best ram presented. This prize consists of a handsome silver cup brought out by Mr. G. Wilson, who has just returned from England.

—STILL THE KNIFE.—Shortly before midnight on Wednesday, two men named Ramon Reyes and Manuel Castro, both «hooligans» of bad antecedents, entered a common lodging house in Calle Requena, and committed a cowardly assault on a colored woman because she would not serve them with mate. An inmate named Rafael Roque came to her defence, whereupon, without a word, Reyes stabbed him with a large knife, ripping his stomach completely open, the wound being highly dangerous. The two «hooligans» then took to flight, and were not captured by the police until yesterday morning. The victim is a young Italian workman of good and peaceable character.

—CIBILS THEATRE.—The dramatic Company of Sr. Almada, without being notable, has proved satisfactory, in a somewhat antiquated style of art. This evening will be given Sardou's melodrama «Los Plebeyos.»

—POLITEAMA.—There will be no performance this evening. On Saturday and Sunday the Japanese will appear for the last time in combination with a Spanish dramatic Company which will represent the evergreen «Don Juan Tenorio.»

—WRITER DEAD.—An afternoon London telegram announces the death of Mr. Albert D. Vandam, a prominent journalist and author of several novels, descriptive works and translations from the French.

—CLEVER PUP.—The latest novelty in street enterprise is a small dog—of the Bullfoundland Wobbly Terrier Skye Spaniel Dalmatian Mongrel breed, more or less—which has been trained to sell lottery tickets. This animal sits on its haunches on a certain window-sill nearly in front of the London Bank, as sedate as a Judge of the Supreme Court, holding in its mouth a bunch of lottery tickets, which it will allow to be examined, but will not relinquish except on word from its master. Whether it would remain proof against the temptations of a juicy piece of liver we have not yet had an opportunity of trying.

—WRONG PLAGUE.—A Buenos Aires contemporary, the Standard to wit, prints in its Montevideo telegram: —«The rumour that some cases of bubonic plague had occurred has been officially denied.» We think that rumor must have been the invention of the correspondent, for no one here has heard of it. We could name various plagues and pests present in this city, social and otherwise, but the bubonic is not yet on the list.

—DIPLOMATIC.—The new British Minister in Argentina Mr. Haggard presented his credentials to President Roca on Monday. There was a large attendance of dignitaries. The address of the Plenipo. and reply of the President were somewhat longer than usual, that of the former making references to the Anglo Chilian boundary settlement.

—FALSE DEITIES. — The B. A. Standard perpetrates the following paragraph, which is unintentionally made very comic by the misprint which we have italicised:—«No public notice seems to have as yet been taken of the fact, although it is a very important one, that when, very properly, opposing in the Senate the grant of $120,000 to enable this country to figure at the Saint Louis Exhibition, Dr. Pellegrini bitterly ridiculed the idea of sending Argentine manufactured gods to the Show, as they were simply disgraceful («vergonzoso») as specimens of industry, and would make Argentina the laughing-stock of the rest of the world.» After this, Argentina will certainly have to be more careful in the manufacture of «gods.»

—MARRIAGE.—The marriage of Mr. G. E. Scoville and Miss Margaret Smith, both of Buenos Aires, was performed on Tuesday afternoon at the Civil Registry in Calle Chacabuco, and in the evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. Monteith Drysdale, the Rev. J. W. Fleming officiating. The wedding was strictly private.

—IBSEN. — The latest news concerning Ibsen's health is, the Academy states, grave. A Vienna doctor who has recently visited him in Christiania reports that he has practically lost the power of speech; he stammers so that only his nurse can understand him. The doctor said further: «Also his faculties are impaired. His loss of memory is particularly noticeable. In consequence of these defects he cannot work. Ibsen is, in fact, completely broken up. He presents the picture of a helpless old man.» Ibsen is now seventy-five, so that recovery seems hardly possible.

—NOT THIS TIME.—The great French costumier Mr. Worth, being interviewed on the question of the crinoline, has little or no faith in its reintroduction. He puts no limits to the vagaries of fashion, but he does not think it at all likely that the capacious petticoat of the Empire will Messrs. Redfern, of sartorial fame, after having given a learned disquisition on the origin of the crinoline, expressed likewise their disbelief in its restoration.

LONDON NOTES

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 30.

Yesterday Lord Milner had a long conference with the Prime Minister at the latter's official residence in Downing-street. The meeting was, of course, private, and no special announcement is, as yet, forthcoming in regard to the filling of the vacant seats in the Cabinet.

Presiding over a great demonstration on the subject of Macedonia, held in St. James's Hall last night, the Bishop of Worcester expressed cordial agreement with the object of the Balkan Committee, and said that the letter of the Prime Minister was not satisfactory to him. Mr. Bryce, M. P., proposed a resolution—which was adopted—to the effect that it was necessary the direct rule of the Sultan should cease in the provinces concerned. The right hon. gentleman said that he believed the letter of the Prime Minister did not represent the feelings of his colleagues on this question. Among the other speakers were the Bishop of Hereford and the Rev. R. J. Campbell.

Statistics prepared by the Cobden Club show that at the Conferences of Trade Unionists and Co-operators held during August and the present month 1,308 societies have been represented, with a total membership of over a million and a half. The numerous resolutions in favour of Free Trade have been passed with less than a dozen dissentients all told, which the Cobden Club regards as satisfactory.

A vigorous letter dealing with the duties of licensing magistrates and their too frequent neglect of them, has been addressed to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain by Mr. Charles L. Rothera, the Coroner for Nottingham. The letter in question was written in criticism of one sent by Mr. Chamberlain to representatives of the public-house trade in Birmingham and Aston.

Sir John Gorst last night, distributing prizes to the students of the Technical School, Halifax, said those countries of whose competition we were now so much afraid possessed technical institutions for a longer period than this country. We had a good deal of leeway to make up, and one grave defect was that students coming up from primary and secondary schools were ill-prepared to benefit by instruction offered.

Alderman Sir James Thompson Ritchie, jute spinner and merchant, was yesterday elected Lord Mayor of the City of London from Nov. 9 next.

At the Thames Police-court yesterday, Dennis McCarthy, a young labourer, was charged on his own confession with the murder of a girl in the neighbourhood of Cable street by stabbing her. It was said the two had been keeping company. The prisoner was remanded.

Richard John Vyner, formerly a lieutenant in the Imperial Yeomanry, who is charged with fraud in connection with the purchase of remounts at the Cape of Good Hope, during the late war, was yesterday committed from Bowstreet Police court for extradition, subject to an appeal within the next fifteen days.

SHORT STORY

Diamond Trumps.

Immediately after lunch, then, I went up stairs to dress for my expedition. I took a perfectly plain, shabby, black dress from my wardrobe and put on a plain black sailor hat. I looked out a pair of worn gloves — they were easy enough to find — and then I considered my appearance in the glass.

«Quite a respectable parlourmaid,» I said to myself. «I hope I shan't meet anyone I know.»

Not that a parlourmaid would have cared to so out dressed so plainly and shabbily. But it seemed to me that I had made myself appear to belong to the domestic class, and that was all I wanted.

My husband was safe in his consulating room, so I took the brooch, and slipped out without seeing anybody, I had already told Anne, my maid, that I was going out immediately after lunch, and that I should probably not be home for a couple of hours.

Abercorn Gardens are quite there quarters of an hour's walk from my house. The afternoon had turned out fine, and there was plenty of sunshine now, with, perhaps, a suspicion of frost in the air. I sped along as fast as possible, looking neither to right nor left, and trying to make my mind a blank. If I thought too much I knew I should falter in my purpose, and go back yet. Even at this distance of time I can still see myself flying along — a shabby figure, with flaming cheeks and anxious eyes that sought the grounnd.

I found that No. 46 was a large house, with a flight of handsome steps leading to the door.

Had I the courage to mount these steps? Yes, I was at the top with a rush, and had rung the bell, perhaps, rather more peremptorily than was consistent with my assumed position.

«Is 'the lady' at home?» I asked. Was that how a parlourmaid ought to ask for the mistress of the house? I really didn't know, but it seemed to answer the purpose.

«Yes. Do you want to see her?» Evidently I had happened on a suitable enough expresssion, for there was no doubt from the man's manner that my disguise — if you can call it so — was a success.

«It you please,» I said, «I want to return her brooch to her.»

The man looked interested.

«Step this way, miss. What name shall I say?»

I had not thought of this, but I made up my mind rapidly.

«Mary Melville,» I answered, trembling all over.

I was shown into a small study to wait while the servant went to tell his mistress—Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon he called her.

Presently he returned.

«Come to the drawing-room, please. Mrs. Fitz Gibbon will see you at once!»

I followed him across the comfortable hall, and was shown into a large room where two ladies were sitting. I was too much perturbed at the time to think of observing particularly. I only had a vague feeling that I must look a strangely shabby creature amid such handsomesurroundings. I felt that I was in a dream, that I was truly some person other than Mary Arnold.

Both ladies were sitting on a couch near a window when I entered the room, but the elder lady rose at once and came anxiously to meet me. She was small and slight, with grey hair, and the kindest dark eyes I ever saw.

«Have you really found my brooch?» she asked, with a pretty, faint flush on her cheeks. «It is too good to be true.»

«Yes, madam,» I said shakily. «I found it this morning in a puddle in Halsbury Road.» And I gave her the brooch, and explained to her just where and how I had discovered it.

«Ah! I remember,» she said, feasting her eyes on the recovered treasure. «I remember that puddle very well. I had stepped into it before I knew. Dear, dear! How strange!» Then she added, kindly: «I feel very grateful to you. It will be a pleasure to give you the reward. Sit down and tell me something about yourself. What is your name?»

«Mary Melville,» I stammered once more. And it was, surely, not a lie. I was Mary Melville before I was Mary Arnold.

Mrs. Fitz Gibbon had gone back to where her friend was sitting, and all at once I became aware that the latter had leaned towards her and was whispering in her ear.

«Perfectly certain,» I heard distinctly. «Not a doubt about it,» and «No mistake, I assure you.»

The second lady had had her back to the light all the time, so that I had not seen her features, but there was something horribly familiar in the loud whisper. My cheeks were blazing, but I forced my eyes from the carpet and found that both ladies were looking fixedly at me.

«Have you any occupation?» Mrs. Fitz Gibbon went on. And, if anything, her voice was kinder than before.

«No—yes—» I stammered. «I am parlourmaid—that is, I am—I am in a house in Halsbury Road.»

«No. 16, Halsbury Road, is it not?» said the second lady, speaking for the first time.

Yes, it was Mrs. Foster's voice, and the house she had mentioned was none other than my husband's. What wretched luck! What hateful humiliation! If the ground could but have yawned, I would have asked nothing better than to jump down and disappear for ever.

(To be concluded in our next).
