Important Queries and Replies

What is the first duty of a man of family?

To secure the integrity of his home and make a sure provision for those dependent upon him.

IN WHAT WAY CAN THIS BE DONE?

In no other way can this be so securely and effectually done, and the home be preserved in all its sweetness and beauty, as by acquiring a Policy in «The Standard Life.»

Countless families and homes are wrecked and made desolate yearly and thousands of children thrown into the great tide of poverty and vagrancy all through the careless improvision and culpable neglect of the bread-winner.

Remember in time, that a policy in «The Standard Life» is a positive safe-guard against the frowns of fortune, a sure protection for old age, the best and safest investment, a precious, in fact the only, infallible provision for the loved ones under your sacred care.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Representatives sat on Thursday. The Bill assisting the sufferers by the explosion of the «Rivera» was approved summarily, completing its sanction. The rest of the sitting was again occupied with discussion of the Bill concerning mortgages of civil salaries, and once more the Chamber adjourned without reaching any resolution. (This Bill, which is only of secondary interest, seems to be blocking the way of more important business. We do not know what there is in it of a specially contentious nature, but it it has already occupied some four sittings without reaching a vote. It is about time that the Chamber got on to something else.)

Some of our contemporaries are again complaining about the delay in discussion of the Budget. We understand that the wait now is for the printing of the Committee Report, from which it would seem that it is a lengthy document, for it was issued several days ago.

While the more moderate of our contemporaries have deprecated the publication of Dr. Gil's open political letter as an inopportune revival of bygone disputes, yesterday's Dia devotes a lengthy article to applauding it, and in part adopting some of its most contentious paragraphs. This, appearing in the President's paper, will only help to increase the ill-feeling the document has already caused. The Siglo was right when it told the President to beware of his friends.

The Siglo continues an almost daily attack on the Port Works, but its fulminations are not always easy to follow. Its latest assertion is to the effect that the eastern breakwater is to be regarded as finished, as no further effort will be made to amend its present broken-backed and deplorable state. This is probably another exaggeration, for, in any case, half the breakwater is still below high tide level, and therefore constitutes a danger to navigation, rather than fulfilling the purpose for which it was intended. These obvious exaggerations of the Siglo defeat its object. The recently reported incident with the Financial Committee also proves to have been exaggerated, the point at issue being a relatively trivial one. Quite enough has occurred in relation to the Port Works to create misgivings in the public mind, without indulging in these exaggerations. What we regret is the obstinate silence of the Government over the matter, for a few words from it would soon tend to set the public mind at rest and put matters in their proper place. We cannot help think that the Government is neglecting its own interest in being so reticent, for it would appear as if took but a secondary interest in the good progress of the works.

THE CLAIM AGAINST THE NEW YORK LIFE COMPANY.

We have already informed our readers that the Argentine Supreme Court of Justice had definitely set aside (thereby confirming the decision of the Chamber of Appeal) the attempt to make effective against the branch in Buenos Aires, the pretended declaration of bankruptcy of the New York Life Insurance Company issued by a Commercial Judge of Montevideo in pursuance of Casimiro Castro's alleged claim against the Company for £250,000.

We have now received from Buenos Aires a copy of the full text of the decision of the Supreme Court, constituting a document of considerable length. Naturally such a document abounds in legal technicalities, intricacies and references that it would be hardly possible to translate. However, setting these aside, we state below, in plain language, as we think they will interest several of our readers, some of the conclusions arrived at by the Supreme Court in the course of its decision. They are as follows:—

Casimiro Castro, as a creditor of the N. Y. L. Company, is represented in the bankruptcy proceedings by the syndic (official receiver) appointed by the Montevideo Judge, the said syndic being the official representative of all the creditors, and hence Castro has no right to take or invoke special proceedings on his own behalf, to the exclusion of the syndic.

The case is not one of those comprised in the Commercial Treaty between Argentina and Uruguay, as it does not treat either of the failure of a head office with branches elsewhere, or of an independent firm. It has been admitted by both parties that the head office of the N. Y. L. Company is in the United States, and the respective offices in Montevideo and Buenos Aires are branches of that head office. In the case of a Company with many branches, each branch has its domicile in the place of its working, but only for the fulfilment of the obligations there contracted by the local agents of the Company. The branch of the Company in Buenos Aires, is essentially mutual, its local funds corresponding solely to the local policy-holders. Such branch, therefore, does not constitute the «independent commercial firm» spoken of in the Treaty, and neither is it a dependency of the branch declared bankrupt in Montevideo. On similar grounds, neither is the branch in Montevideo such an independent commercial firm, for at the time of its registration there, it was formally declared that the capital of the Company was held in the United States, whence would be remitted the sums necessary to meet its contracts in Montevideo. It is therefore impossible to establish interdependence between the two branches, and furthermore it is a recognised principle of international law, that a declaration of bankruptcy against a branch office by a local Court has no effect outside the jurisdiction of that Court.

Again, the creditors in Montevideo have no necessity or pretext for taking measures against the branch in Buenos Aires, for they are able to claim against the funds of the head office in New York, which has made itself responsible for its obligations in Uruguay.

Finally, by the conditions of the N. Y. L. Company's working in Argentina, its local funds correspond solely to the claims of the local policy-holders, whose rights it is the duty of the Argentine Courts to protect, and there is no surplus for claimants from Montevideo, the Argentine branch not having operated with funds drawn from Uruguay.

It will be clearly seen from the above that the Argentine Supreme Court has found quite sufficient grounds to set aside the claim, without entering into the two fundamental questions of whether the claim was a just one or whether the declaration of bankruptcy by a Montevideo Commercial Judge was in order. With regard to the latter, we may point out that the alternative for omission to pay a fine imposed as penalty in a criminal action, is not bankruptcy, but imprisonment, and therefore what corresponded was an order of imprisonment against the Company, which it would have been impossible to execute, thereby reducing the affair to an absurdity.

The final moral of the whole business is that if Casimiro Castro wishes to pursue his claim any further, he must go to New York.

We may here add that the concurrent attempt to make the «Sud America» Company's branch in Buenos Aires responsible for law-costs in Castro's suit has equally been definitely defeated.

THE CABINET CRISIS.

(First Impressions of London Papers.)

The Times: — «It is not disparagement of Mr. Ritchie and Lord George Hamilton to say that their withdrawal from the Cabinet, more than half anticipated as it was, is a matter of quite subordinate importance compared with the resignation of Mr. Chamberlain, by universal admission the strongest member of the Administration, and the statesman who has made, in our time, the most powerful and abiding impression both on the masses at home and on the younger nations that are growing up to manhood within the Empire.... While Mr. Balfour is backed by the Duke of Devonshire and the rest of the Ministry, except the Cobdenite seceders, and while he has Mr. Chamberlain's loyal and independent support, the reconstruction of the Cabinet need not be expected to involve very serious difficulties.»

The Standard: — «Mr. Chamberlain's ungrudging admission that his scheme has failed to commend itself to the Constituencies does credit to his sense of honour and political discernment. There can, indeed, be no doubt that he has correctly gauged the public sentiment. Even such straws as the trifling turn-over of votes at the St. Andrews election show how the wind is blowing.... As a private individual, Mr. Chamberlain is, of course, at liberty to bring such influence as he can command to bear upon the public mind. Nor need the discussion of Imperial Union do any harm; though we are convinced that the more it is considered the less likelihood is there that the particular solution of the problem advocated by Mr. Chamberlain will meet with the general approval of the country.»

The Morning Post: — «Mr. Chamberlain's resignation, while it can hardly make him any enemies, will win for him the hearts of that great number of the best of his countrymen who for years have been looking for a statesman who dared risk himself and his prospects on his convictions.... Hardly less interesting than the prospects of Mr. Chamberlain are those of the Government.... It is the Government which, by the mouths of Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Wyndham, declared, as the war was about to begin, that it had deliberately and knowingly postponed preparation, that it knew the consequences of that course, and was prepared to take the responsibility for them. The Government has now to meet and accept that responsibility with all that is involved in it. That is a heavy load for any Government to bear, especially for one that has now to reconstruct itself for the third time.... The resignation of Mr. Chamberlain and the withdrawal of the policy of preferential tariffs from the prospective policy of the Government renders unnecessary an appeal to the country.»

The Daily Chronicle: — «The resignations of the Free Trade Ministers mark the complete triumph of Protection in the Cabinet.»

The Daily News: — «Mr. Chamberlain's latest triumph in wrecking in this respect exceeds his previous performances. He left the Liberal Party broken, but sound at the heart. He leaves the Tory Party without either heart or head....His policy has failed, and he admits it without reserve. The amazing thing is that so astute a man could ever doubt that it would fail....Mr. Chamberlain has met his Waterloo, and, in his heart, he knows it. His coming campaign will be invested with deep personal interest, but it will be the campaign of a lost cause.»

The Daily Mail: — «To-day, at least, we know how we stand. Between the Prime Minister and Mr. Chamberlain there will exist an alliance which is none the less genuine because upon the one question of food taxes there will be no compromise on either side.»

The Morning Leader: — «It would be gross folly for Free Traders to relax their efforts with a Protectionist Prime Minister in office, and a Protectionist agitator of Mr. Chamberlain's calibre carrying on an active Protectionist campaign in the country. For Mr. Chamberlain will, of course, continue to support out of office the Government which shares his views, but not his self-confidence.»

The Westminster Gazette: — «We have a tertium quid Government which on the one hand rejects the principle of Free Trade, and on the other 'acquiesces in'—that is the phrase—the withdrawal of its most vehement Protectionist. It is so weakened and water-logged and so completely discredited in the country that its survival for more than a few weeks seems at this moment an impossibility.»

The St. James's Gazette: — «Lord Lansdowne, discredited by the most appalling revelations of our times, remains; Mr. Chamberlain, the Minister whose work will make the history of this Cabinet, goes.... It will be perfectly apparent to the elector with the most Bœotian head in the country, that the return of Mr. Balfour to power involves the return, sooner of later, of Mr. Chamberlain, and the triumph of Mr. Chamberlain's policy.»

The Star (Friday): — «This is Mr. Chamberlain's Elba; he has yet to reach his Waterloo.»

«Scholarship Howlers.»

Mr. G. Stanley Ellis gives in the October Longman's Magazine some «Scholarship howlers» from a «General Information» paper. One of the questions was: «With what recent events are the following names connected, Pekin, Venice, Westminster Abbey?» Among the answers were: «At Pekin thousands of Legations were killed.» «At Venice is the Vatican an ancient temple.» «Venice is a most important city in Italy. It was quite recently, amidst splendour and pomp, the scene of the crowning of the aged Pope of Rome.» «Venice is famous for the recent Earl's Court Exhibition of Venice in London.» The most startling reply from the point of view of an educationist was certainly this: «Westminster Abbey is where the English Parliament is held. There the Education Bill was recently passed.»

Among the other questions were: «What institutions are connected with the following places—(1) Girton, (2) Kew, (3) Bisley, (4) The Oval, (5) Broadmoor?» There was some inexplicable confusion between the first and the last. More than one replied that Girton is a lunatic asylum. One gave it far more honour, and said, «Girton is a famous college for training ladies. Our present Queen is a Girton girl.» Another says, «Girton is a country residence near Cambridge.» «Girton is a great golf centre. Mr. Balfour often plays here with other distinguished players.» «Kew,» said the first answer to the next question, «is a college for naval surgeons.» Another candidate making an obvious confusion, said, «Kew is the largest college in the world. It is in Russia.» To go to the last sub question, «Broadmoor is an important race-meeting and grouse-shooting.» «The Oval is the property of the Gentlemen Players.» But this was the very best: «The Oval is where the Lords play.»

Valuable Recipes.

Interesting particulars of the value of several secret recipes are given by a writer in Chamber's Journal. A Wiltshire firm of bacon-curers paid no less than £10,000 for the Brandenburg method of curing hams; while a certain special chutney, or rather the method of mixing it, originally bought for a few rupees from a poor Hindu trader, changed hands a few months back for £7,500. The famous Worcester sauce is made according to a recipe hundreds of years old which was bought «for a song» from the butler of a county family by the then head of the firm of Lea and Perrins, of Worcester. To day the little faded scrap of yellow paper, with its almost indecipherable hieroglyphics, is valued by its owners at many thousands of pounds sterling.

The recipe for Banbury cakes dates from the time of the Civil War, when the now familiar dainties were invented by an old dame and disposed of with level impartiality to Royalist and Roundhead alike. Tradition has it that she bequeathed the secret as a dowry to her daughter, whose husband amassed a fortune by their sale while still a young man. Since then their manufacture has enriched quite a score of people, and they are now made in enormous quantities and exported to the ends of the earth. In a single year, it is recorded, one Banbury baker alone disposed of no fewer than 139,500 twopenny ones.

When, a few months ago, the monks of La Grande Chartreuse were expelled from France, the senior abbot carried with him a tiny casket of tempered steel. Therein reposed the recipe for the world-famous twin-liqueurs—the chartreuses, green and yellow—that was to fetch shortly afterwards in the open market no less than £330,000. For centuries the precious script had lain secure in the monastry's strong-room. Originally it consisted of a single fragment of parchment six inches by nine. But as time went by other ingredients were discovered, and supplementary directions and instructions were continually being added, until the one bit of skin has grown to a volume of over one hundred pages. It is, without doubt, the most valuable book in the world.

A Peace Flag.

A correspondent writes to the Times of Sept. 29, from Rouen:—

The Universal Peace Congress has been torn into conflicting factions by the introduction, or rather by the hint of the introduction, of a design for an international peace flag. At the congress at Monaco it was decided to appoint a committee to consider the question of an international peace flag. The Prince of Monaco went on a visit to the German Emperor at Kiel, and one evening at dinner suggested to him the idea of designing a peace flag. The Emperor took the menu, decorated with a picture of his latest battleship, and on the back drew a rough design. Delighted with his success, the Prince of Monaco assured the Imperial draughtsman that there would be no difficulty in arranging for the acceptance of the flag at the Peace Congress, and charged himself with the mission. Thus it happens that on a question felt by all the congress to be one of minor importance so great a combat has been raised. The Prince of Monaco has to justify his promise to the Emperor and try his hardest to secure the acceptance of the flag. Some rumour of the Emperor's act having leaked out, several of the Austrian papers published caricatures containing suggestions for the design, none of them very complimentary to the author. This decided the Emperor not to acknowledge the flag until it had been accepted, and thus to the curious position of the war-lord of Europe designing a peace flag was added that of his being afraid to stand sponsor to it. All this added to the difficulties of the Prince of Monaco, and even the fact that he had come round in his yacht to Rouen to assist in influencing public opinion in his favour could not prevent a great deal of opposition. The members of the congress complained that they had had no notice of the flag, nor were they aware of the design. Although the Emperor was not officially named as the author, the fact soon became common property. This led many to express their view that, even were a flag necessary, they could not approve of one produced under such auspices and presented to the congress in such a fashion. The German delegates were not ready to support the flag, and while some of the French were ready to acquiesce «for State reasons,» as they put it, there was a strong body against it. The general sentiment was in favour of postponing any discussion, but this would not suit the Prince of Monaco nor relieve him of his self-imposed duty to the Emperor. So the conflict degenerated into an unseemly scramble of lobbying and even worse, though much of the value of the Emperor's flag had been lost by the adoption unanimously by the congress of the colours of a peace flag, already in use in America, as those to be used in the peace education of children. This success for the American flag was due to the eloquence of Mme. Severine. The Emperor's flag seems rather too complicated to secure its easy adoption. On a red ground there is a cross in white having at the centre of its arms a red four-pointed star. In the top corner near the pole are to be placed the national colours of the nation using the flag. There are to be smaller white stars on the red ground equal in number to the nations adopting the flag. If desired the word «Pax» may be inserted in the large red star—there were French delegates who suggested «Alsace-Lorraine.» The symbolism of the flag is obscure, but the reason for its creation is very easily understood. On a red ground small stars are to be placed in white according to the number of the nations accepting the flag. In the design as shown to the Peace Congress there were 18 stars.

Launch of a British Cruiser.

Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth, and Co. launched on Thursday, September 24, at Elswick, Newcastle-on-Tyne, the first-class armoured cruiser Hampshire for the British Navy. The cruiser is 450 feet long, and her displacement is 10,750 tons. Her armament will consist of two 7.5in., ten 6in., and ten 12-pounder guns. Sir Andrew Noble, speaking after the launch, said the Hampshire was sister ship to the Devonshire, Argyll, Roxburgh, Antrim, and Carnarvon. The engines, made by Hawthorn, Leslie, and Co., Newcastle, would give 21,000 h. p. and a speed of 22 1/4 knots. Steam would be supplied from six single-ended boilers and seventeen boilers of the improved Yarrow type. The armour would be six inches thick at the belt, casemates, and barbette, 4 1/2 inches on the bulkheads, and ten inches at the conning tower.

SUNDRIES.

—WEATHER.—Yesterday this was yet warmer and more threatening, but rain still held off, and in the late afternoon it cleared somewhat. Storm is reported from the north of the Republic and unsettled conditions in other parts. Rain is more wanted every day.

—MAILS.—The P. S. N. Co's. «Orita» is expected from the West Coast this morning, and will be despatched homeward bound about 3 p.m The mail at the G. P. O. closes at 1 p. m.

—THEATRES.—This evening and tomorrow the Japs will perform for the last time, in combination with a scratch Spanish Company giving «Don Juan Tenorio.» Those who go will thus have seven acts of drama, a variety show and biograph for their money, which ought to satisfy the most exacting.—«Don Juan Tenorio,» which in some mysterious way seems to be associated with All Saints' Day, will also be performed by Sr. Almada's Company at the Cibils Theatre.—On Saturday next the Spanish Dramatic Company of Sr. Wenceslao Bueno will appear at the Politeama with an extended repertoire of blood-curdling pieces, among which will be found such alluring titles as «Jack the Ripper» and «The Bleeding Nun.»

—MUNICIPAL.—According to latest report the Municipality is inclined to make peace by «climbing down» over some of its latest obnoxious propositions. We are able to state that at all events some members of the Board recognise that the Municipal imposts and restrictions on the sale of food are excessive, and it is to be hoped that their counsels may prevail. Meanwhile the Municipality has come into conflict with the Government on two points which we need not mention in detail. At present we should imagine that the life of a member of the Municipality is not altogether a happy one.

—MARRIAGE.—The approaching marriage is announced of Miss Lina Terrara Campana, daughter of the Uruguayan Consul in Genoa, and Mr. Gerard J. Stringer, belonging to a distinguished English family resident there.

—DEATH.—The death has occurred in the Caridad Hospital of the young Italian Rafael Roque, who was stabbed by the hooligan Ramon Reyes. The latter will now have to take his trial for murder.

—DEATH.—A New York telegram reports the death of Mrs. Booth Tucker, of the Salvation Army, from injuries received in a railway accident at Dean, Iowa State.

—PLEASE OBLIGE.—We must again request our readers and subscribers, when sending to our office for extra copies of our paper, to send the cash at the same time, as it is materially impossible to keep separate accounts and send to collect for small sums of 15 or 20 cents, and, as we do not like to refuse them, the consequence is that we have to lose the money.

—The Latest.—«Popocatapetl made easy» is to be the latest result of American enterprise. Some may remember that an American syndicate lately bought that most unpronounceable of volcanoes from its proprietor, General Gasper Sanchez Ochoa. It is now planning, we hear, to spent several millions in making the peak popular. In addition to the construction of a cog-wheel railroad from the base to a modern and luxurious hotel at the summit, it is proposed to construct electric elevators in the crater, by which sightseers may descend several thousand feet, and obtain a view, by electric light, of the great subterranean cavity. Unless Popocatapetl hastens to resume activity, they will be having a quick lunch counter and a typewriting office in that crater very shortly.

—Happy Text.—Two curates at a church in Maryport (Cumberland) have just resigned. The senior curate preached one Sunday his farewell sermon, and he chose a text which astonished the congregation. It was a portion of Abraham's direction to his young men: «Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship.» The Cumberland papers quaintly add: «Much comment has been excited by the text!»

—Answered at Last.—In the course of a lesson on the «cat» in a Board School, the master, trying to find out what his pupils remembered of a previous lesson, asked this question: «Can anyone tell me to what family the cat belongs?» After questioning eight or nine boys, he was giving up in despair, when a hand was raised. «Well?» asked the master. «I think the cat belongs to to the family that owns it,» was the diminutive pupil's answer.»

LONDON NOTES.

Thursday, Oct. 1.

Silence broods over the Cabinet proceedings as far as any announcement of the filling of vacant gaps is concerned, but there appears some important correspondence relating to the resignations of Lord George Hamilton and Mr. Ritchie. The Secretary of India, it is now known, resigned in ignorance of Mr. Chamberlain's withdrawal, and, as Mr. Ritchie's letter bears the same date, it is presumable he, too, knew nothing of that fact.

Lord Dalmeny was yesterday adopted by the Midlothian Liberal Executive as candidate for the county at the next election. His lordship, who explained his views to a meeting of the committee, stated that the present Government had ceased to retain or deserve the confidence of the country, Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal policy far from strengthening the ties between the Colonies and the mother country would probably tend to create actual division between the different parts of the Empire. To Mr. Balfour's Retaliation policy he was also opposed. One of the most urgent needs at present was the reorganisation of the Army. He favoured licensing reform on the lines of Lord Peel's report, sympathised with the Eight Hours Bill for miners, and thought one of the first duties of the Liberal Government would be the amendment of the Education Acts.

Speaking at a Liberal demonstration attended by over two thousand people in Edinburgh last night Sir Robert Reid, M.P., criticised the apathetic attitude of the Government towards Macedonia, and said that the Government would be supported by all parties in the country in any vigorous and active steps they thought proper to take.

Mr. Harold Cox's reply to Mr. Balfour's pamphlet on Protection and Retaliation was issued yesterday. Mr. Cox contends that Mr. Balfour's arguments are largely hypothetical, and such as would almost imply that he is not a native of this planet, so widely removed are they from terrestrial economics; while his alleged facts are frequently inaccurate.

The majority of the delegates from all parts of England and Wales, numbering about 2,000, who are attending this year's Conference of the National Union of Conservative Associations, have arrived at Sheffield to take part in to-day's proceedings, which include the Prime Minister's address to a great mass meeting in the evening.

Heavy decreases are to be noted in the Revenue returns so far as the amounts paid into the Treasury during the second quarter of the current financial year are concerned. The total decrease on the half-year as compared with the corresponding six month of the previous twelve months was £1,106,516.

In the Southern Charity Football Cup competition at Reading yesterday Reading beat Queen's Park Rangers by a goal to nil. At Chelmsford, Essex defeated Norfolk by 3 goals to 2.

Sir Michael Herbert, British Ambassador at Washington, died at Davos Platz yesterday at the age of forty-six. He had been for some time seeking restoration to health, and it was thought had progressed so favourably that he was contemplating an early resumption of his official duties.

SHORT STORY

Diamond Trumps.

Conclusion)

«Mrs. Foster is surely mistaken,» the kind voice resumed. «She appears to mistake you for—for Mrs. Arnold, of Halsbury Road. My dear,» she went on, turning to Mrs. Foster. «Perhaps——»

«Yes, yes; I had better leave you,» Mrs. Foster said, and she rose to go.

Mrs. Fitz-Gibbon went with her to the door. They stood outside just for a minute, and, oh! the misery of overhearing what Mrs. Foster said!

«There no mistake, absolutely none. I met her at the Lauries' concert last year. She was spoken of afterwards as one of the three pretty women there.»

Please do not think me vain for repeating this! Never was compliment less appreciated.

«Well, well, my dear, we must see about it.» And Mrs. Foster went, and Mrs. Fitz Gibbon returned to me.

«My dear,» she said. «Are you really Mrs. Arnold? And how is it that you come in this——»

I made an utter fool of myself. I put my face in my hands and sobbed and cried, and cried and sobbed, as if my heart would break. It was humiliated beyond bearing, and felt that nothing could ever give me pleasure more.

«If my husband knew,» I said between my sobs, «he would never forgive me, never!»

«Tell me all about it,» said the gentle voice. «I see there is sore trouble somewhere. Don't be afraid to speak.»

She made me sit beside her on the couch, and was so good and kind to me that I gradually became quieter. I told her the whole story. How we had left certain comfort in the country for possible advancement in town. How miserable I felt, because it was I who had proposed the move. How we were just on the rocks and did not know where to turn, How the practice was growing steadily, and would be a spendid one in time, if only—

But there I broke off and rose to go.

«I can never thank you enough,» I said, «for being so kind to me.»

«My dear,» she said, hesitatingly. «You must not go without the——»

«Oh, no! oh, no!» I cried, «I could never take it now. Oh, how could I have been so mean to think of——»

«Don't get excited again, don't now!» Mrs. Fitz Gibbon said. «Go home now. And I should advise you to tell your husband all about it—but not till to morrow! And, my dear, don't bother about Mrs. Foster. She is a good-natured little soul, and I shall ask her to say nothing about all this.»

«Thank you a thousand times,» I said. And I went from the room and out into the street feeling like a miserable, whipped dog.

I need hardly tell you that I was not a very cheerful companion at dinner that evening, nor that I passed a wretched, sleepless night. When morning came I had a miserable headache. First I thought I would lie still. There was nothing to get up for — nothing but misery. But, on second thoughts—no, I could not lie there all day, thinking of my humiliation. I must get up and go about my duties as usual. And must I tell my husband. Mrs Fitz Gibbon had advised me to, but I shuddered to think of what he would say and how he would look.

Well, I dressed, and went downstairs to the breakfast-room. My husband was there before me, and waiting to begin breakfast. A fire was burning brightly, and everything looked so comfortable that I could not but feel my misery somewhat lightened.

«You had a wretched night, Mary,» my husband said. «And you've great saucers under your eyes. What's wrong?»

«Oh, nothing. Nothing of any consequence,» I answered, as I poured out his coffee.

There was a letter lying by my plate, but I gave it no attention till we were half through breakfast.

«An unfamiliar handwriting,» I thought. «Some body wants me to sing at a concert, I dare say.» And that reminded me of Mrs. Foster, and my misery was on me again as bad as ever.

Finally, after looking over and under and round it, I did get the lengh of opening my letter. I glanced first at the signature, and read, «Jeannette Fitz Gibbon.» No more indifference. I was all attention in a moment.

This is how the letter ran. I know it by heart:

«46, Abercorn Gardens,
Thursday Evening.

«Dear Mrs. Arnold,—I felt more sorry for you yesterday than I can say, and I have a suggestion to make which I beg you to take in good part. I propose to lend your husband £1,000. I ask no security. I know your husband to be an honourable man, and can trust him to repay the loan if things go well with him, as I feel sure they will. If he can pay me interest at the rate of 4 per cent. so much the better. Come and see me before long. We must not be strangers now.

«Believe me, sincerely yours,
«Jeannette Fitz Gibbon.»

The reaction from yesterday's misery was almost more than I could bear.

I handed the letter silently to my husband, and he read it with wondering eyes that had a dawning hope in them.

«What does it mean, Mary? I am all at sea.»

«It means—oh, it means, Will, that I have made a dreadful fool of myself. But I think you'll maybe forgive me!»

I told him the whole story, and absolution was easily granted, thing being as they were.

It is many years since this happened. We are flourishing people now, and the debt is paid long ago — so far, at least, as such a debt can ever be paid.

THE END.
