Dear Mr. Figari,

I have received your letter enclosing the introduction from Mlle. Monnier, and my wife and I will be charmed to make your acquaintance. If you are free on Sunday afternoon would you come here at about half past five, by which time we shall be back from a concert? Hoping that you will be able to come, and with my best compliments, believe me,

Yours sincerely,

I have been thinking of you and how much I love you and how much I care for you and how much I want to see you and how much I want to hear you and how much I want to be with you and how much I want to be near you and how much I want to be close to you and how much I want to be in your arms and how much I want to be in your heart and how much I want to be in your soul and how much I want to be in your life and how much I want to be in your love and how much I want to be in your grace and how much I want to be in your mercy and how much I want to be in your kindness and how much I want to be in your gentleness and how much I want to be in your patience and how much I want to be in your long suffering and how much I want to be in your goodness and how much I want to be in your faithfulness and how much I want to be in your steadfastness and how much I want to be in your strength and how much I want to be in your courage and how much I want to be in your power and how much I want to be in your wisdom and how much I want to be in your knowledge and how much I want to be in your understanding and how much I want to be in your insight and how much I want to be in your discernment and how much I want to be in your judgment and how much I want to be in your reason and how much I want to be in your intellect and how much I want to be in your mind
and how much I want to be in your heart
and how much I want to be in your understanding
