MONTEVIDEO, JULY 18, 1893.

18TH OF JULY, 1830.
On the above date, the anniversary of which is to-day celebrated as a national holiday, the Constitution of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay was solemnly sworn.

On such an anniversary we cannot neglect to offer our congratulations to the people amongst whom we have cast our lot, adding our hearty wish that, before the anniversary occurs again, the clouds of misfortune which for several years have darkened the Republic will have commenced to disperse, and that she may once more be prosperous, contented, and advancing and independent.

Parliament.
GENERAL ASSEMBLY.
Closing of the Ordinary Sessions.
A meeting of the General Assembly was held on Saturday afternoon, under the presidency of Sr. Gomen-soro, there being present 8 Senators and 28 Deputies.

After the usual routine business, the following Message from the Executive was read:
Executive Power.
Montevideo, July 15, 1893.
Hon. General Assembly.

The E. P. having been informed by means of your Note that the Hon.
Chambers were ready to proceed to the closing of the ordinary sittings of the 3rd period of the XVII Legislature, those sittings are hereby declared solemnly closed by means of this Message. The E. P. would fail in complying with an imperative duty if it did not take this opportunity of recognising the efficacious assistance that the Hon. Legislative Body has always lent it in the realisation of its ideas, employing the fulness of your patriotism and intelligence in the study of the important and complex problems that have been submitted to you, and contributing to their solution in the sense claimed by the general conveniences of the country.
But notwithstanding your recognised intelligence, there still remain unsanctioned some measures of primordial importance, especially those referring to the Budget and the annual taxes, and as the E. P. further desires to submit to the Legislative Body various matters of institutional order related to public administration, it announces to you that it will shortly employ the constitutional prerogative which enables it to convoke the Hon. Chambers to extraordinary sittings. The E. P. reiterates the considerations of its greatest appreciation. -- JULIO HERRERA Y OBES.

The President of the Chamber then announced that in compliance with the respective Article of the Constitution and in accord with the Message of the Executive, the ordinary sittings of the 3rd period of the XVII Legislature were declared solemnly closed.

The proceedings then terminated.
The Permanent Commission held a sitting in the afternoon under the presidency of Sr. Montero, when the Commission was declared duly installed. No further business was transacted.

The Entertainment Society and the Ambulance Lectures.
A weekly contemporary of last Sunday has a lengthy paragraph calculated to raise unpleasantness between the two above named institutions, and making, in no measured terms, a serious charge of intentional rudeness against the Honorary Secretary of the Entertainment Society.

As it happens, the paragraph published by our contemporary is incorrect in every detail and we can give it the fullest and most specific contradiction.

With regard to Tuesday afternoon, the Secretary of the Entertainment Society was not in possession of the Hall or anywhere near it, but had been there in the morning, when he left explicit directions with the workmen that the Hall was to be left free for the Ambulance Lecture in the afternoon. The first intimation he had that these directions were not obeyed or that there had been any cause for complaint, was the violent paragraph in the contemporary referred to. If the workmen refused to suspend work during the Lecture, it was entirely on their own responsibility and contrary to the express orders given them.

With regard to the evening Lecture, the Secretary of the E.S. wrote to Dr. Gibson in the morning, in the courteous terms due to a stranger, asking what hour he could finish his lecture by. Dr. Gibson himself named 9.15, which was accepted without demur and the Hall was left free until that time.

It had originally been hoped to have had all the stage-fittings, rehearsals, etc., done with by the Monday evening so as to leave the Hall quite free on the Tuesday, but this was rendered impossible by the bungling and dilatoriness of the workmen engaged, so much so that it was not until the evening of the performance that they finished work, and even then several minor matters were left incomplete.

The Rio Grande Revolution.-- Capture of Admiral Wandenkolk.

Telegrams were received on Sunday afternoon, and have since been fully confirmed, announcing that the Brazilian Government cruiser "Republica" met the "Jupiter" with Admiral Wandenkolk on board, about 6 a.m. on Sunday, at the bar of Canaviers, to the north of Santa Catalina. It was dark and foggy at the time and Wan-denkolk made an attempt to land on the adjoining coast. The "Republica" fired a few shots, which were answered by a signal for parley. The "Republica" then intimated surrender, which was obeyed by the "Jupiter" without further resistance. Wandenkolk, Barcellos, and all the officers and revolutionists accompanying them, as well as 37 revolted marines from the "Camocin" were taken under arrest to the "Republica" which is conveying them to Rio Janeiro, where she is expected to arrive to-day. All the arms and ammunition were also seized, and a guard left in charge of the "Jupiter".
With regard to the steamer "Italia" it is said that it is now lying off Maldonado, where it has been taken charge of by the Uruguayan gunboat "General Rivera," which will bring her to Montevideo to be disarmed. The "Republica" it is added, was supported by two swift-sailing torpedo boats, her own rate being 20 knots an hour. After she has delivered her prisoners at Rio Janeiro, she will be sent to Montevideo on station. The fiasco of Wandenkolk's attempt is attributed to the non-cooperation of the land forces, which failed to carry out the previously organised plan of joint attack. It is said, however, Sarraiva, Tavares and Salgado are concentrating their united forces of 3000 to 4000 men round Yaguaron, with the object of taking it. It is reported as well defended, the Brazilian gun-boat "Bahia" has been ordered to leave Asuncion at once for this port. The "Republica" was commanded by Commandant Alejandro Alencar. A telegram has been received from Rio Janeiro announcing that tranquility prevails in all parts of Brazil except Rio Grande. Regret is expressed in many quarters here at the failure of Wandenkolk's attempt.
General telegraphic communication has not been reopened yet.

SUNDRIES.
The ordinary sittings of the Chambers were formally closed by a Message from the Executive on Saturday. We understand that the convocation to extraordinary sittings will be issued this week.

Withoutless President Herrera was justified from his point of view for the warm thanks he gave the Chambers for having cooperated with his ideas, but when he speaks of their patriotism and attention to the general conveniences of the country there is room for more than doubt. The session has been remarkably barren in useful legislation; the Budget, which may be considered the keystone of any return to prosperity, remains uncompleted after ten months deliberation, and the Chambers distinguished themselves by sanctioning a scandalous electoral law which has sounded the death-knell of whatever small remnant of suffrage was left the people. We think, therefore, that Dr. Herrera might have omitted any reference to patriotism and have made his thanks a little less effusive without contravening public opinion or committing any injustice.

Perhaps, after all, it is fortunate for the Chambers that they look to the President and not to the people for any expression of thanks for the services they have rendered--or have omitted to render.

According to the Siglo and the Heraldo, the petition against further silver coinage will probably be favourably considered. The Nacion however, produces a shameless and insulting paragraph insinuating that the petitioners did not speak the truth when they urged that there was a superfluity of silver, and saying that Government would do as it liked in the matter and would tolerate no impositions! The Nacion forgets that the Government is or should be, though unfortunately it is not--the servant and representative of the people, not their dictator, and that it is its duty to follow their wishes and interests as properly expressed. For Government to contract for more silver after the representations made to it, would be a criminal folly and an outrage on the commercial collectivity of the market.
Does the Nacion wish us to believe that it seriously contemplates that outrage?

Payment of the local obligations for April was at last commenced on Friday, when a goodly list was cancelled. Let us hope they will now proceed without so many delays as has recently been the case.

Fines have already been un-fined on some unfortunate dealers for selling matches without the requisite stamp on the box.

We learn that the Charley Opera Company will not be here until the 25th or 26th of the month, the end of next week.

Our correspondent "Altruist" takes to task both ourselves and our previous correspondent "Diogenes" for remarks or enquiries concerning the Missioners now amongst us, and even accuses us of exhibiting a certain amount of intolerance towards them. We think that "Altruist" has taken offence just a little too quickly. For our part, we have chiefly confined ourselves to reproducing remarks from some of our Buenos Aires contemporaries tending to illustrate the reception they met with there. And, although we do not wish it to be assumed that we approve or endorse everything we quote, we have no objection to confessing that we shared the desire to be informed as to what was the special object of these Missioners in visiting us or what special message they had to deliver that was unknown to us already or that could not be made known by the resident clergy? And we do not see that our correspondent "Diogenes" has gone any further than this, nor can we perceive in his letter the least desire either to interfere with or to insult them. It must be remembered that the large majority of the community here are not ignorant savages, to whom the Christian Gospel is made known for the first time, nor are we still in that age of credulity when every announcement made under the name of religion has to be accepted implicitly. Therefore, when Missioners such as these arrive, there is sufficient cause for enquiry both as to their purposes and their credentials, nor do we perceive any intolerance in the enquiry.

If the Missioners come to deal with those already in the fold of the Church, it must be confessed that their presence is in a certain measure a reflection on the resident clergy. If they come to make new converts, their methods are not likely to ensure success, for those they wish to reach do not attend the places where they hold forth. And, moreover, the community being an educated one, any outsiders will be such from conviction rather than from ignorance, and are not likely to be converted by arguments or statements to which they are allowed no opportunity of reply. And--here is the great difficulty--toleration has not yet reached the pitch when religious questions can with impunity become a question of public argument as well as of private conviction. As an example of this witness the remarkably intolerant reply recently given by the Archbishop of Canterbury to the invitation to attend the Congress of Religions at Chicago. In plain words he refused to acknowledge there was any religion in the world except his own, and therefore considered discussion impossible. This was not the view of the founders of Protestantism.

The following paragraphs from the Observer of June 18 refer to our recent and present Missioners-- Mr. Ernest Satow, who has just been appointed our Minister to Morocco, is the greatest living Japanese scholar. He originally entered the Consular service in Japan about the time that foreign intercourse with that country commenced, and was for many years Japanese secretary to our legation in Tokio.
Subsequently he was appointed Minister Resident to Siam, and was then promoted to Montevideo. It is, no doubt, one of the arcana of diplomacy why the official whose knowledge of Japan surpasses that of all living Englishmen should, for some years past, be serving his country in States where that knowledge can be of no earthly use either to him or to his Government.

Mr. Walter Baring, who succeeded Mr. Satow in Uruguay, has been in the Diplomatic Service since 1866, and has served in half the capitals of the world. His name was very promi-nently before the public prior to the Russo-Turkish war, when he was sent to investigate the Bulgarian atrocities. His report on this subject played a very important part in the famous agitation in this country led by Mr. Gladstone in the winter of 1876-7.

It is not the custom of any paper with the least shred of respectability or decency to make business competition or political difference a reason for gross and slandrous personal attacks on members of the staff of another paper, in their private or social capacity. An honorable paper would even go out of its way to avoid the suspicion of having done such a thing.

The following tale from the Englishman is too good to be lost.
During the recent mission, one of the Missionaries addressed one of our well known Ministers as follows:
--"I never yet met a Christian who smoked tobacco." The Minister referred to finished rolling up a cigar-rette, and said: "Well, you see one now."

The following paragraph from the Review refers to the same subject--"We have been told, and our authority seems to us sufficiently good to warrant our recording it as a probable fact, that one of the Missionaries at present in our midst recently declared that a man who drinks anything stronger than water, or even smokes tobacco, is a backslider, or unregenerate, or no Christian, or words to that effect.
This sweeping condemnation of the most ordinary habits of men, is as silly as it is detrimental to the true interests of the Christian religion, since it tends to evoke a spirit of hostility even among those who would otherwise approve these missionary efforts, while it raises a contemptuous smile on the lips of the "unregenerate". The only inference which we should be inclined to draw from the above intolerant dictum is, that these gentlemen are determined to keep their heaven severely select, which course we entirely approve, as the prospect of Eternity in their society, even in eternal form, would indeed be too terrible to contemplate with equan-imity."

We are pleased to be able to state that last Wednesday's function of the Entertainment Society, in spite of the bad weather, was perhaps the most successful from a financial point of view yet held in the Lafone Hall. There were about 220 people present and the receipts were $126, both of which numbers are considerably over the average.
The Society is not, however, yet recouped for the cost of the stage fittings, which have caused more expense than would at first sight appear or than was anticipated.

We trust that our weekly contemporary will see the advisability of retracting in its next number-- should it appear again--the ill-advised attempt it has made to raise ill-blood between the Ambulance Classes and the Entertainment Society, as well as the attack it has made on the Honorary Secretary of which is shown by the statement we make to-day. If it fails to do this it can only be for personal motives which we do not care to qualify and which are not allowed expression in respectable papers. At all events we give it the benefit of the doubt as to its having been grossly misinformed as well as an opportunity to make the amende honorable.

The Execution has signed and According to London telegrams a rumour is current there that during his recent visit the Czarowitch fell in Wales. The gunboat "Inflexible" has dria on account of disorders there.

The Khedive is again agitating

BUENOS AIRES
A decree will be issued in a few days for disarming all the other

Santa Fé authorities will anticipate it and disarm voluntarily.

It is stated positively that Governor Costa will resign.

The Minister of Finance has ordered the Accountant General to ficials who are indebted to the Department are to have their salaries stopped.

The proposal to hold a great much favour. A long list of names of persons approving of it has been published.

There was another crowd in the Plaza on Friday to hear the result of the debate in the Deputies on the National Hymn; but the number of people was nothing like that on Thursday. The galleries of the House were, however, quite full. Dr.
Magnasco rose and put to the Minister Lopez the questions he had been summoned to reply to. The Minister began by denying categori-cally that the Government had issued any order whatever in reference to the National Hymn. He said the whole thing had arisen from a letter to the President of the Republic from the family of the author of the Hymn, expressing a wish to have some of the verses changed.
That it was perfectly true that he (the Minister) had suggested to the Lord Mayor, in order to avoid possible disturbances in the theatres, that only half of the first verse and the end of the second should be sung. He wound up by saying that the Executive would willingly obey whatever decision the House came to on the matter. Dr. Magnasco made a long speech in reply; the Minister answered him briefly, and the House rose at 4.15 p.m.--B. A. Herald.

"The Missioners."
To the Editor.

Dear Sir--Who is "Diogenes" anyhow? I don't mean who he is personally--his name and all that-- but what kind of individual he is, who in these nineteenth-century times of religious tolerance and freedom of thought can deliberately sit down and write a set of carping enquiries as to the private rights of opinion and motives of action of certain of his fellow beings? He says he is a man interested in religious movements, and yet his letter contains this queer paradox, "Judging by the lists of services published weekly in our English papers, it would seem that the different Churches are well seen after by their respective pastors," (the italics are mine). In what direction does he exercise his interest in religious movements? If he is not attached to any of the denominations mentioned in his letter, but merely picks up his information from the papers? Why not let these large and influential bodies speak for themselves if they desire to do so? Why, oh why? take the name of Diogenes? Does he mean, by assuming the name of the Grand Old Cynic, to insinuate dishonesty of purpose to these missioners? Or is he merely mimicking the tub part of the business, having an all-round snarl at those who, as he may think, affect to be better than their neighbours?

Personally I know nothing whatever about these missioners except what I read in the papers, they are not going to interfere with me, I feel certain, and I rather think they are not come specially to look up "Diogenes". Why then should I or anyone interfere with them, much less insult them and the many persons who no doubt welcome and enjoy their visit? You yourself, Mr. Editor, have done violence to previously expressed convictions, by remarks similar to those of your correspondent; but there is the excuse for you which the exigencies of making copy concede to people in the position you occupy. But for "Diogenes" there is no excuse whatever--in fact he damages himself by his own admissions. By what right does he interest himself in religious movements? if he seeks to deny the same rights to these gentlemen? Is he not a missioner, more or less? The original Diogenes fancied himself secure in his tub, but this filcher of his name has ensconced himself in a house of glass, which the smallest grain of common sense brings about his ears.

I am, etc., Altruist.

The Irony of Fate.

(A SHORT STORY.)

"Mr. Beeton," said Lady Louise suddenly, "now that our pleasant afternoons are over—for they have been pleasant in spite of your intolerable room—may I ask if I am never to see you again?"

"I do not think it advisable for me to ever see you again, Lady Louise," he answered gravely, "but I shall always take an interest in you and wish you well."

"Why must you be a friend at a distance?" she asked, and her cold eyes smiled at him, with the expression in them which he had seen but once before.

"I will tell you the truth," he said, his eyes on the ground. "I have fallen in love with you. Yes, I have had the presumption to fall in love with one of society's queens."

He laughed bitterly, and she kept her attitude without moving. She told herself with a smile that she would have to stoop to conquer, but she would bear his halting tale first.

"Yes, I have fallen in love with you! For the first time in my life I have known what it is to wish for a woman's presence, to tremble at her touch. Before you go away from me for ever, I want to tell you something about myself. You will despise me all the more, no doubt. I was not always even as well off as I am now—that I live in this squalid style at present is my own fault. You know my theories well enough. I could do better if I chose. I could even win a name for myself, and some day I should not be ashamed to ask you to be my wife—my wife!"

He paused in a sort of transport, and then went on:

"My father was a common shopkeeper—such a man as you, Lady Louise, would spurn with your foot should he come in your way. My mother, in point of birth and education, might, perhaps, be on an equal footing with your cook. I am telling you all this to show you what kind of a man has dared to love you. But that is not all. My mother's sister when she died left her only daughter in her charge, and she was brought up with us, as one of ourselves. When she was eighteen my mother herself died, and I swore to her that I would guard and protect Bessie. You remember the red-haired girl whom you saw last night? He broke off suddenly.

Lady Louise nodded her head, and a faint smile curved her lips. Truly the red-haired cousin did not seem to her such a desperate obstacle.

"Yes, you saw her," resumed Beeton, his eyes fixed on the painted portrait before him, "and you remarked upon her as a different type from yourself. Why, you are so different that I can hardly believe you both to belong to the same sex. Compare your eyes, for instance, with—"

He broke off for an instant with a groan.

"But your cousin has a cast," said Lady Louise cheerfully. "I don't see why it should affect you so. You seem to me to be taking a great deal of trouble, and if you will forgive my saying so, humiliating yourself very unnecessarily."

His face grew suddenly haggard, and instead of stopping his confession he hurried on.

"When Bessie was left quite alone in the world, there seemed to me to be but one way in which I could protect her without—remark. She is not strong enough to earn her own living, poor girl, and so I—"

He stopped. The tale was even more difficult to tell than he had thought it would be, and yet he had rehearsed it many times to himself.

"And so I asked her to be my wife," he wound up dully.

A shrill little laugh broke from Lady Louise's lips. Virginia's practised ear heard it in the next room, and her hand sought her capacious pocket, in which, among other things, was a smelling-bottle. She listened intently, but as only a murmur of conversation followed the laugh, she concluded she had been mistaken, and returned to her novel with an easy mind.

Lady Louise knew now why James Beeton had desiginedly humiliated himself before her. He had guessed at her love for himself, and wished, by abasing himself in the dust at her feet, to spare her any feeling of shame. He put himself before her that she might spurn him, that she might have the scornful pleasure of treating him as she might an importunate beggar in the street: Her eyes filled, but pride dried the tears before they fell. But she could not speak.

He went on in a low, broken voice.

"The—the fatality of it all was that our banns were published for the first time on the Sunday after I met you."

Again Virginia heard the strange laugh, and again she fingered the smelling-bottle.

"It was too late then to break it off. I could not shame the poor girl like that. I should have been a brute if I had been able to do it—and thank Heaven I am not a brute."

He had not looked at her once while he told the story. He did not look at her now.

"Of course this is nothing to you. I am quite aware of that. Many men must have loved you before this; but never, perhaps, one so thoroughly plebeian. I do not excuse myself. I ask you to forgive me. Oh, if only it had not been! If only I had been free! I would have made you love me! Now I must banish myself from your sweet presence for ever, and try and live as though you had never entered into my heart and filled it. Oh, the pity of it!"

She had seen many men in love with her; she had never seen one so strongly moved as this. She had known chivalry; but never such chivalry as this. He knew she loved him, and to save her from the shame of letting her think he knew it he had laid himself down at her feet to be trampled on.

"We are to be married next week," he wound up slowly.

He looked from the painted Lady Louise to the pale original at his side. She put her hand towards the portrait.

"Would you like to keep it as a wedding present?" she said, with a cruel little smile.

She did not mean to hurt him. She only wished to conceal how bitterly she was suffering.

"If? Are you mad? Do you think I could live with your face always smiling at me? Rather than that—he took up the dagger she had once playfully referred to—I would cut it to pieces," he said, with a wild laugh.

She laid her white fingers fearfully on the glittering blade.

"The picture is mine," she said quietly.

He flung the dagger down.

"You tortured me beyond endurance," he said in moody apology.
