ALICE IN BLUNDERLAND.

(The editor of this paper makes no attempt to account for the aberrations of the following erratic effusion which came under his notice tolatato to suppress. Privately it is his opinion that matters in the composing room must have got mixed, and that the result is a hybrid between an article from the "DAILY SCORCHER," extracts from "MULLY-ERTHING'S HANDBOOK OF THE RIVER DISH" and some pages from Lewis Carroll's well-known fairy tales. However, he promises solemnly that it shall not occur again.)

"Hurry up" said the White Rabbit, trotting rapidly, or you will be too late for the show.

Alice didn't like being ordered about by a four-footed creature, but thought it best not to disobey. Besides, she was curious to see where she was being led to.

Presently they came to a building with several steps, a low front and two or three paltry columns. Over the door was written in large letters "National Bank of Disinfection." Outside was a crowd of people with their pockets turned inside out, weeping and cursing.

Alice, much out of breath, asked why they were weeping.

"Because they have put their money in the bank, and cannot get it out again," replied the Rabbit.

"Why did they do that?" asked Alice, always curious.

"Because the Law compelled them."

"Then doesn't the Law help them to get it back?" said Alice, whose notions of Law were vague.

"No," said the Rabbit, "it is the Law that prevents them, for the men who make the Law have spent the money."

"But in my country," blurted out Alice, always ready for an argument, "men who take money which does not belong to them are called thieves and are put in prison."

"Strange sort of country, that," contentedly sniffed the Rabbit, "where we call them legislators or financiers and put them in the Chambers."

The Rabbit trotted off again, Alice following as fast as her little legs would allow.

Presently, they came where two roads crossed each other. In the middle stood a man, fast asleep, dressed in a clumsy uniform, a cutlass by his side and a cap on his head.

The Rabbit cautioned Alice not to wake him. She came up on tip-toe.

"This," said the Rabbit with evident pride, "is a Vigilante. He is never in the way when wanted and always there when not wanted. He is called Vigilante because of his want of vigilance and he is given the cutlass in order that he may be punished for using it. It is his business to guard the lives and property of the people, which he does by assisting thieves to escape and preventing restoratives being applied to injured persons."

This was rather more than Alice could understand all at once, so she wisely held her tongue. Presently there arose a shouting and a cry of "Help! Murder!"

"Now," thought Alice, "we will see of what use is this Vig.-Vig.—," she couldn't manage the whole word, so stopped short at Vig.

The Vigilante shook himself, took his eyes out of the pocket where he had put them to prevent their being sunburnt, (Alice had not noticed this, as his eyelids were closed,) gave one glance in the direction whence the noise proceeded and then quickly vanished in the other.

"Where is he gone?" asked Alice.

"To the baths," replied the Rabbit, "a man has just been taken out of the water half-drowned, and the Vigilante has gone to prevent his being restored to life. It is the custom here, inherited from the Choctaw Savages, and we are very proud of it. We often quote it as a proof of our advanced civilisation."

The Rabbit seemed so much in earnest over this that Alice thought it best to say nothing, but followed the Rabbit, who ran on as before.

Presently turning a sharp corner the Rabbit ran into a fierce looking creature in military costume, who immediately began using such dreadful language that Alice had to put her fingers in her ears to shut out the words. The Rabbit, too, was evidently dreadfully frightened, for he fell on his knees in a penitent attitude.

After using bad language till he was hoarse, the Officer thumped the Rabbit on the nose, and swaggered away, muttering, "tiene que respetar los militares."

This was Greek to Alice, but like a sympathetic little soul, all frightened as she was, she went to the Rabbit and used her handkerchief to dry the tears which hung on the ends of his whiskers.

When sufficiently recovered, the Rabbit said, in an awe-struck tone, "That was a Colonel, my dear. He is a great warrior and the pride of the army."

"Has he been in many battles?" meekly enquired Alice.

"No, but he has had a glorious Career," answered the Rabbit. "He has boxed an old woman's ears, shot a policeman who remonstrated with him, had several soldiers tortured to death in an entirely new and ingenious fashion, headed several revolutions, and he never says his debts. He has also done several other things, which, being a child, you would not understand. Altogether he is an exceedingly brave and honourable man, and he will soon be a General. He is a noble example of the Protectors of the People."

"How does he protect them?" asked Alice.

The Rabbit looked puzzled for a moment, but after having scratched the back of his ear with his hind foot, a favorite action with rabbits when puzzled, he replied, "It is this way, you see. If the people had not to pay for some one to protect them, they might get rich and prosperous and happy. So to prevent that calamity, a large part of their earnings is taken from those who work and given to others who do not work. And as the latter are allowed to abuse and annoy them in every way, they are called the Protectors of the People. It is an Institution. We are splendidly Protected here. Come along and I will show you some more Protection."

Following the Rabbit again, Alice presently came to two Creatures. They were alive, but she could not identify them, for she had never seen anything like them in her picture books at home.

These Creatures had enormous heavy burdens strapped upon their backs, so that they could not rise from the ground, and were moreover tied down with strong chains to prevent their moving in any direction.

"That is Comercio," said the Rabbit proudly, "and this is Industry. See how magnificently they are Protected. The load upon their back is called Duties, and the chains are Taxes."

Presently the Creature which the Rabbit had called Industry, panted out in an exhausted voice, "I am suffering. I can not move. Give me more Protection."

At this some men came up and tied Industry down with still stronger chains and heaped more burdens on his back.

"There!" said the Rabbit triumphantly. "See how splendidly it is Protected. Our Government boasts of its Protection to Comercio and Industry, and that is how it does it!"

Industry seemed ready to die under the extra burden; but as the Rabbit hurried her away, Alice could not say anything.

On their way they met another Vigilante, who, for a wonder, was not asleep.

"Why don't you tell him that you have been assaulted by the Colonel?" asked Alice, thinking of the policeman at home.

"Hush, child!" said the Rabbit, pulling her away in dread. "Don't let him hear you or I shall be locked up. Anyone who has been assaulted is locked up at once. It is what they call an escandalo. Besides it would probably cost the Vigilante his life to interfere with a Colonel. It is one of the Triumphs of our advanced Civilisation that guilty parties are never punished, though the innocent frequently are. Come along, child, and I will show you another Triumph."

The Rabbit then led Alice to a church porch. Here there was a table with some urns upon it. Behind it sat two or three men laughing together and smoking cigars. From time to time soldiers and policemen with the heads of cats came up and put large bundles of tickets in the urns, being cordially welcomed by the sitters at the table. A little distance off was a crowd of people who were struggling to approach the urns with similar tickets, but were kept back by more soldiers and policemen. Occasionally one of the crowd would break through and manage to place a ticket in the urn, which was at once taken out and burnt, whilst the offender was quickly arrested and marched away.

"This," said the Rabbit, "is an Election. Those," pointing to the struggling crowd of people, "are the Voters, so-called because they are not allowed to vote. If any of them do vote, their votes are not counted, and the voter is liable to instant execution. It is a wonderful Institution, and far superior to any electoral customs in Europe. Hush, they are about to declare the result."

The tickets having been counted by this time, but not very carefully, one of the men at the table got up and in a solemn voice declared that the Official Candidate had been elected by a majority of 3749 votes, whereas all the soldiers and policemen cheered.

"There!" said the Rabbit, "There's a triumph for you! There are only 2000 voters in the place, yet the Official Candidate has secured a majority of 3749. Long live the Official Candidate! Listen to the voice of public opinion." Meaning the soldiers and policemen.

Alice was beginning to feel tired as well as bewildered. So much civilisation was she trying all at once. She asked the Rabbit to let her rest a little.

"But you haven't seen half there is to see. I want to show you the Chamber of Misrepresentatives, where they pass laws contrary to the wishes of the people and forge the burdens for Comercio and Industry. And then there is the Military Tribunal of Injustice where they give one man six months for murder and another twenty years for trying to escape from slavery. And then there are the National Arms on which is inscribed Republic in order to show that this is an Oligarchy. And then there is the Liquidators' Court, where the debtors take charge of the institutions they have ruined, so as to keep out the creditors. And then—"

The only answer was a gentle sigh. Alice was fast asleep.

When Alice awoke next morning her little head ached, and she told her sister, putting her arms round her neck and nestling close to her, that she had had such an ugly dream and that she would much sooner live in a country that had not so many Triumphs of Civilisation.

NEWS OF THE DAY

MONTEVIDEO

SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1893

Annunciation. Lady Day. Quarter Day. General Holiday. 84 days past, 281 to the end of the year.

Holiday.

To-day being kept as a church and general holiday, THE MONTEVIDEO TIMES will not appear again until Tuesday morning next.

On account of the regatta, there will be no cricket to-day. To-morrow (Sunday) there will be a practice match, at which it is hoped as many players as possible will turn up.

The following team will represent Montevideo in the return match to be played against Buenos Aires, at Palermo, during the Easter holidays.—Messrs. J. Adams, H. C. Alexander, P. D. Chater, A. D. Dunbar, E. J. Hunt, R. E. Hunt, R. Moor, W. L. Poole, W. P. Slater, E. M. Stanham (captain) and either Mr. Nugent, R. N. or Mr. Halstead, R. N. We believe this team leaves on Wednesday, returning the following Monday morning.

The Company does not pretend to contain any "stars," but comes with a very good reputation from Brazil, where it has been playing recently. The prices are most moderate, stalls being only $1.50. The Opera for this evening is Marchetti's "Ray Blas," in which the prima donna Sra. Maria de Magui and the tenor Sr. Candido Elias will appear. Tomorrow will be given Ballini's "Norma," which has not been heard here for some time. The Company will remain for 20 performances.

8243, 9560, 5297, 10935, 10187, 9694, 4903, $100 each.

SUNDRIES.

—No quorum and no business in the Representatives on Thursday. The Honorable Deputies, suffering from overwork over the Electoral Reform Bills, preferred to anticipate the holidays.

—The event of to-day will be the regatta held in the bay by the Montevideo Rowing Club. Careful arrangements have been made for the accommodation of visitors, and special boats will be run from and to Buenos Aires. The weather yesterday had ceased to be threatening, so there are prospects of a fine and successful day, for which the Club has our best wishes.

—Those who are interested in the auction sale of Mr. Greenwood's furniture and effects are reminded that it takes place at 1 p.m. to-morrow and that the house will be on view to-day.

—An Argentine contemporary which we will not be so invidious as to name supplies the following startling item.—A tramcar coming into the centre from the suburbs, had two collisions the other night, one being with a coach of a violent character. If this news was only properly circulated here, it might put a check on emigration to a city intested with coaches of a violent character.

—We have to apologise to our Buenos Aires contemporary the Times of Argentina for slaughtering its editor prematurely. The Dr. White whose death we mentioned on Thursday was not the editor of our contemporary but Dr. J. Houghton White of Quilmes, the eldest son of Lieut. General White, R. E. We were deceived by the similarity of names.

—The Municipal Board has published a lengthy series of regulations for the use of carriages going to the Central Cemetery.

—Judge Ballesteros has sentenced Inocencio Lorenzo to 15 years' imprisonment and 3 months' solitary confinement for the murder of a Bohemian peddler named Antonio, some 15 months ago. When Inocencio comes out of prison we recommend him to change his remarkably inappropriate name.

—The Nacion in a half-hearted way denies that the Government has made any promotions on account of the Minas election, but does not go so far as to say that it is not going to do so. Some native contemporaries insist that the latter is true. They also say that the Bill withdrawing from Government the power to make military promotions without the consent of the Chambers, except in the regular course to fill vacancies, will be brought forward again. It was proposed last year and quietly shelved.

—The Bill of Health for February is unusually favorable. There was not a single death from small pox, and a decrease in those from zymotic diseases. There was one death from yellow-fever, at the lazaret in Flores Island.

—The Telegrafo asserts positively that the new silver from Chili will be here within a week.

—The Oriental Consul in Genoa telegraphs that two fatal cases of cholera have occurred in that port.

—It is now generally known that the missing grocer, of whom we spoke yesterday, is Sr. Bartolomé Moya, of the Almacén Universal in Calle 18 de Julio. His creditors have applied to the Commercial Judge for bankruptcy to be declared.

—It is telegraphed from Berlin that the charges brought by Rector Alwardt against Bismarck have resulted in a thorough failure, he being quite unable to prove them. He has been publicly censured by the President of the Reichstag for making accusations he was unable to support.

—Our contemporaries are again full of denunciations of gambling houses, which have been established openly, even in some of the most central parts. Several of the residents of the Cerro have also sent a protest to the Chief of Police, against a roulette-table established there. The police, however, remain inactive, and all these denunciations only serve as excellent advertisements for the hells. Perhaps the parties who run them are too influential for the police, who are great respecters of persons.

—Letters from Italy announce that Bishop Soler of Montevideo has left Rome for the Holy Land, where he will spend Easter, and may be expected back here in May. Unfavourable comment has been aroused by a stupid protest presented by some of the Uruguayan pilgrims avowing their adherence to the temporal power of the Pope. It is asked what business they have to mix themselves up in Italian politics?

—The "Colorado" party hold a political meeting in the Politeama

Oriental tomorrow afternoon, to great importance seems to be attached, so much so that it is said Government is seeking means to prohibit or to break it up. Government, it need hardly be said, looks with distavour on all political meetings, partly because it is afraid of any expression of public opinion, partly because all parties are opposed to it.

—The Municipality thinks the streets have been watered enough for the present, and has ordered the watering carts into retirement until next season! Of course it is never dry or dusty during the autumn or winter.

—On account of the regatta the race-meeting which was to have been held at Maronás to-day is transferred until to-morrow afternoon. The programme is sufficiently interesting.

—Telegrams published yesterday from the frontier confirm the statement that the federal forces under Saravia have suffered a severe reverse at the hands of Colonel Motta, who had some 600 men, including a battalion of the 28th infantry, well armed. The federals, badly armed and disciplined, offered little resistance. About 100 were killed; wounded or taken prisoners. A detachment of 500 men, fully armed, from Rio Janeiro, has entered Rio Grande city.

—A respectably connected girl named Josefa Blanco, Oriental, aged 19, committed suicide on Thursday morning by taking a preparation of arsenic. The deed was committed in the house of her parents, Soriano 297, who discovered her in the agonies of death. Medical assistance was called but too late to be of service.

—Crossed in love" is said to have been the motive.

—On Thursday morning trials of the Mauser gun and smokeless powder were made at Punta Carretas by the 4th Chasseurs, in the presence of the President of the Republic, the Minister of War and various military authorities. Nothing is said as to the results except that unfavorable comments were made on the bad marksmanship of some of the men and officers.

—London and other telegrams announce the arrival of Queen Victoria at Florence. The Princess of Wales has paid a visit of courtesy to the Pope.—The Lancashire cotton strike is terminated, the operatives accepting a provisional reduction of 3% in the wages, to be restored when business improves.—The "Undaunted" has been floated off and will go to Malta for repairs.

—There have been disastrous storms in the Bay of Bengal.—The agitation in Ulster against Home Rule increases. Lord Salisbury has been obliged to suspend his intended campaign there on account of his health.

BUENOS AIRES
—According to the arrangement between the National Government and the Governments of Córdoba and the province of Buenos Aires, the interest and amortization of the bonds issued to guarantee the notes of the Banks of those Provinces ought to be paid by the National Government to the Conversion Office in paper money which would be destroyed, but no such payment has been made and the Conversion Office has applied to the Minister of Finance, for the sum of $3,501,543 gold.

—Dr. White of Quilmes, died on Wednesday morning. We understand that he had an attack of typhoid fever and that, in his anxiety to attend to his professional duties, he omitted to take proper care of himself. He was much esteemed both professionally and socially.

—In reference to a request by the National Railway Board for the payment of $3,000 m/n. monthly, for the ordinary deficit of the line from Dean Funes to Chilecito, the Department of Public Works advises the completion of the line between Patquia and Chilecito, as this is the most important mineral region in the Republic, and a great impulse would thus be given to the mineral industry and traffic there.—B. A. Herald.

A prominent member of the foreign community has disappeared in the person of Mr. John Drysdale, whose name has long been a household word in connection with the trade of Buenos Aires and our local charities. He was born in Haddingtonshire, Scotland, and was nephew of the late Thomas Drysdale, one of the earliest Scotch settlers and afterwards merchant princes of the River Plate. Having spent many years in the firm of Thomas Drysdale and Co. he became subsequently head of the house of J. and J. Drysdale, and held a high position among the commercial public, being at various times appointed on the board of one or other of the State Banks. He has been, in fact, for a long time regarded as a representative of the British public of our city, and whenever anything wanted to be done his countrymen looked to him for counsel and co-operation. Nor was he slow to give his services for the public welfare, and thus it came to pass that, in spite of the labors inseparable from a leading commercial house, he always found time for the duties which various posts of honor imposed on him. About two years ago he was simultaneously chairman of the British Hospital, the Convalescent Home and the British Cemetery, in all of which he felt the most lively interest. He was one of the founders of the Convalescent Home, and one of the earliest and most liberal benefactors of the Boys' Orphanage. His time and his purse were alike at the call of Charity, and his splendid and indefatigable efforts on the occasion of the British Hospital Bazaar, last June, contributed in a signal manner to its marvellous success. He rendered many valuable services also to the Scotch Church of which he was a strenuous supporter, and was often elected to official positions. His sympathy for the poor, and liberal donations to every charitable purpose, irrespective of creed or nationality, are too well known to our readers to call for eulogy. Suffice it to say that he possessed like his uncle that spirit of munificence which has distinguished the name of Drysdale in Buenos Aires. During a career of nearly 40 years he gained a large number of friends, among Argentines as well as among the foreign community. His genial disposition and goodness of heart eclipsed every other feature of his character, and the news of his death will cause a wide-spread feeling of regret. He had been ailing for some time, and died on Wednesday after a painful operation for hernia, aged 59 years, having resided 43 years in this country.—B. A. Standard.

THE GUN CLUB SPORTING POWDER is second to none in the market. Sportmen in the country wanting an extra strong, clean powder should insist on their agents obtaining it for them.—To be had in Nos. 2, 4 and 6. Sole Importers, Carlisle Smith and Co., Rincon 29, Montevideo.

LONDON NOTES

TUESDAY, FEB. 21.

In the House of Lords, yesterday, the subject of police protection in the execution of writs by night in Ireland was raised by the Marquis of Londonderry. Members of the Government explained that the law as declared would be conformed to. The question of an appeal was, however, under consideration.

In the Commons, Mr. J. W. Mellor was elected Chairman of Committees amid Ministerial cheers. Mr. H. H. Fowler explained the Registration Bill. It proposed to repeal all provisions requiring the payment either of assessed rates or poor rates. The qualifying period would be reduced to three months, ending on the 24th June of every year; successive occupations in the same electoral area would be sufficient; and lodgers would no longer be required to send in their claims. The work of registration would be entrusted to superintendent and district registrars, and the register would come into force on the 1st November. After some debate the Bill was brought in and read a first time. So also was the Scotch Registration Bill, introduced by Sir George Trevelyan. Mr. Asquith moved the second reading of the Employers' Liability Bill, but Mr. Chamberlain moved an amendment, and the debate was adjourned. Mr. Bartley opposing, the second reading of the Railway Servants (Hours of Labour) Bill had to be deferred.

An important conference of representatives of temperance organizations throughout the country will be opened to-day in the Memorial Hall, and be continued to-morrow and on Thursday. Mr. Leonard Courtney, M.P., will preside.

The Prince of Wales held the first Levee of the season at St. James's Palace yesterday. About two hundred presentations were made.

At a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, held last night at the London University, Captain H. Bower read an interesting paper descriptive of his recent journey across Tibet.

M. Le Royer, President of the French Senate, has resigned, ostensibly on the ground of ill health. A Paris Correspondent however, states that the reason is more probably to be found in the growth of a party in the Senate in favour of M. Ferry's becoming President before the Senate, sitting as a High Court of Justice, begins the trial of M. Baibaut, the ex-Minister, for corruption.

The Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Hawkins yesterday decided an important question affecting Trade Unions. They held in an action brought by a master mason and builder of Hull against officials of local Trade Union societies that the defendant could not be sued as representing the members of the societies.

Sir Francis Jenne and a special jury were again occupied yesterday in hearing the Drummond divorce case. Mr. Drummond was under cross-examination throughout the sitting.

Charles Johnson, a powerfully-built Swede, was committed for trial from the Bow-street Police-court charge charged with attempting to murder the second mate of a barque on the high seas. A remarkable story was told to the magistrate in respect to the prisoner's conduct and strength.

Mr. Hannay gave his decision at Marlborough-street yesterday on the proceedings arising out of the raid on the «Travellers' Club» in Gerard-street, Soho. He fined the proprietor, Richard Roder, 50l. Three men were fined 5l. each and a fourth 40s. The other defendants were required to enter into recognisances not again to haunt gaming houses.

There was great excitement on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, yesterday, leading shares being offered for sale in blocks of thousands. Reading opened at 36 and fell to 29 1/2 in ten minutes. The sales in this stock were enormous, 400,000 shares being sold in the first hour. After the announcement later in the day that the Reading directors had decided upon the appointment of receivers, there was renewed liquidation and bonds suffered as heavily as stocks.

On Friday night, a Vienna Correspondent telegraphs, a sentinel on a very remote spot opposite the Great Central Cemetery seeing a man approach him who did not answer to his repeated call, fired and killed him on the spot. The soldier, who is quite young, did nothing more than obey instructions. Examination has shown that the sad incident was due to a box such as is often practised among soldiers. The victim was himself a soldier who had to make the rounds of the sentinels, and approached by stealth to see what the young man would do.

Mr. Arnold Forster is desirous of seeing the National flag flying from the Clock Tower of the Palace of Westminster in company with the lighting arrangements. He has ascertained that this is the only country in the civilized world where the National flag does not float over the Parliament House. He has been in correspondence with the First Commissioner of Works, with the object of removing the reproach.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 22.

In the House of Lords yesterday, the Public Authorities Protection Bill, the Sale of Goods Bill, and the Bills of Sale Bill were each read a second time.

In the Commons Mr. Fowler informed Mr. Benn that Government proposed to appoint a small Commission to inquire into the question of including the City in the general system of London administration. Mr. Mundella, in answering several questions respecting railway rates, said that he had received from Sir H. Oakley a list of articles for which the new rates would be reduced, and he was ready to lay it on the table. Mr. Kimber called attention to the disparity of representation existing between certain constituencies of the United Kingdom, and proposed a resolution, to which Sir Charles Dilke moved an amendment. Both were withdrawn after a speech by Sir W. Harcourt, pointing out that the matter would have to be dealt with before long. Sir A. Rollit having raised the question of appointing a committee to consider the expediency of prohibiting the sale of under-sized flat fish, the House was counted out.

What is described as a «Temperance Parliament» was opened in the Memorial Hall yesterday, under the presidency of Mr. Leonard Courtney, M.P., and attended by representatives of many important temperance organizations throughout the country. Eight resolutions in favour of reforms for the promotion of temperance, such as the amendment of the licensing laws, Sunday closing, the limitation of the hours of sale on week days, the closing of public-houses on election days, and local vote were passed. One resolution called for a suspensory measure, pending the promised licensing legislation of the Government.

Replying to a deputation who waited upon him at the War Office yesterday to ask for an increased rate of wages for the workmen employed in the Small Arms Factory at Enfield, Mr. Campbell-Bannerman said that the new Labour Department was going to consider the whole question of the wages paid to workmen employed in Government factories, and whatever arrangement was made would apply to the Enfield factory as it would to others.

The London County Council yesterday resolved that it should be the market authority for the county, and that to it should be given the sole right to establish additional markets in that area, as well as the power compulsorily to acquire existing markets (other than those owned and controlled by the City Corporation, which, it was pointed out, would inevitably form part of the unified government of London), as well as market property and market rights. An amendment, moved by Mr. Fardell, in favour of inviting to co-operation of the Corporation, with a view to the joint action of that body and the Council, was defeated by 71 votes to 31. The further consideration of the question was adjourned.

We regret to record the death of Mr. John Pettie, R. A., after a long illness. On Thursday last Mr. Pettie was removed from Hampstead to Hastings, and on Monday he underwent the operation of having an abscess removed from the brain. The Prince of Wales visited the Cart Horse Show at the Agricultural Hall yesterday, and remained to witness the judging.

The cotton employers of Lancashire have decided not to accept the operatives' proposal of 2 1/2 per cent. reduction of wages for three months. They are, however, prepared to meet the operatives in conference to-morrow.

This morning is published an account of an interview with the three sailors of the ship Thekla who murdered and partly ate their companion on the wreck, and are now awaiting their trial in prison. One of them showed evident signs of distress as he gave the details of the crime. The other two, however, seemed to believe that they were perfectly justified, and expressed surprise that this should be brought in question.

A Cairo Correspondent telegraphs that Riaz Pacha, the Premier, has taken over the portfolio of Public Instruction from Zeky Pacha. The Premier still remains at the head of the Department of the Interior. Further changes are believed to be pending.

A girl of thirteen was yesterday sentenced at Grenoble to pass twelve years in a reformatory for the murder of a companion under circumstances which show her case to be one of shocking juvenile depravity. She first took from her purse containing the wages she had earned at a silk factory, and then pushed her into a stream, held her head under water, and struck her with a stone till she was dead.

Mr. Justice Barnes delivered judgment yesterday in the case of Hampson v. Whittaker which has been before the Court for some years. The plaintiff, a niece of the testatrix, propounded a will dated 1878, under which she claimed the bulk of the property. The Duly of Lancaster opposed, on the ground that the will of 1878 was revoked by another made in 1890; and an intestacy was claimed, as the later will was not now in existence. The learned judge upheld the contention that there had been a revocation, but suggested that a number of annuities and bequests might be put in force. Counsel said that this suggestion would be carried out.

In the Gooch matrimonial case, in which the jury lately found against both the petitioner and respondent, Sir Francis Jenne yesterday delivered judgment. He dismissed the wife's petition, and said that as there were grave faults on both sides, there should be no orders as to costs.

Among the witnesses called at Bow-street Police-court yesterday against Charles Wells, of Monte Carlo notoriety, was the Rev. F. C. A. Blake, of Ross, Herefordshire, who described the circumstances under which he parted with 1,500l. to the prisoner. Another adjournment was granted.

Scott's Emulsion

All over the world doctors agree in recognizing the great superiority of Scott's Emulsion.

Montevideo, August 6, 1891. For many years I have used Scott's Emulsion with notable advantage to anemic and scrofulous patients, and especially women and children. I have also found it most useful in affections of the respiratory organs. This preparation replaces cod liver oil with great advantage, on account of its agreeable taste and rapid digestion.

A Faulty Heroine.

A STORY, BY NOHA M. MARRIS.

The great town of Middleford, like most Midland towns, is very forward in all educational matters. Besides the big foundation schools of St. Alban, there is a college which has the peculiarity of admitting both men and women students on absolutely equal terms to all subjects therein taught. And this equality has been maintained from the first. The good things of learning were not in the beginning made sacred to the lords of creation, and finally, after heroic struggles, snatched at and obtained by the weaker vessels.

The reason of this extraordinary liberality towards women students is due to the fact that the founder was not a venerable monk or abbot of former times, duly impressed with the uselessness of learning in women. He was the celebrated 'self-made' man who founded the college to help other self-made men through the uncomfortable process of making things uncomfortable to themselves, except for the inevitable assurance and self complacency that always seems to sustain them, doubly uncomfortable to those around them. And the founder himself had not made his fortune without, it was said, ruining others.

Certainly, even if he had not successfully solved the problem of making bricks without straw, he had known how to buy up all the straw at the cheapest rate for his own bricks in later years. About five o'clock of the eventful day when Eleanor received the communication from Cassell's, she ascended the steps of this college to attend a debate: one of the ordinary meetings of the 'College Common Society.' The C.C.S. had been established to meet the want which the 'earnest students' had at length confessed to feeling for some kind of intellectual relaxation.

The professors had consented to chaperone the proceedings by the nominal presence of themselves and their wives. Sometimes a professor turned up, sometimes a wife, sometimes only a deputy in the shape of an assistant lecturer or demonstrator.

The relaxation was provided for by tea, followed by a debate, papers, or 'musics' for the 'intellect.' Sometimes there were 'readings and recitations,' and if these were 'dramatic' there was usually more 'relaxation' than 'intellect' about it. Nevertheless, though you might quarrel with the form, the raw material was generally good, and the surface cleverness in debating shown by those really in earnest was very diverting, and sometimes extraordinary.

A little ill-dressed, curious-spoken, spectacled youth would get up, and, despite his odd appearance, demolish previous arguments, and by shrewd sense, if not by wit, establish his point. Where they got into deep waters was with the metaphors and illustrations. Eleanor never could say how it was, but the tragic always seemed to turn to comic, and the high-flown sentiments to sound like an advertisement puff.

'Well, Eleanor,' said one of her friends as she entered the tea-room (a transformed laboratory), and tried to exchange a few words amidst the Babel of sounds, 'so Cassell's is out, and you have the prize. It is sure. I congratulate you heartily. We shall have to chronicle these doings in the Magazine, but tell me, I thought Edith meant to try. Did she give it up, after all?'

'Hallo, Miss Payne!' broke in one of 'advanced' lady students, before Eleanor could answer. 'So you've come out as a literary character, have you? I certainly should not have expected it, to judge by the effusions in the Magazine that have been taken of as yours. But perhaps—with an ill-natured smile—'you didn't think it worth while to waste your best efforts on us.'

Eleanor turned to her, standing very tall and straight. She looked very handsome in her summer costume of brown cloth skirt and jacket, with a perfect-fitting white cambric blouse, dotted with red spots, tucked into the leather belt round her slim waist. The neat sailor hat, just showing the coils of dark hair, admirably became her tall and elegant figure. Miss Jones was a contrast in a loose snuff-coloured gown of no special make, much trimmed with greasy-looking green plush, and an enormous shade hat, trimmed with a much-bedraggled 'Liberty' scarf of another shade of green. Several people had heard Miss Jones's gratuitous attack on Eleanor and they all listened for her clear, deliberate answer.

'bad form,' discredit having been brought on women speakers though the particular style of Miss Phoebe Sparks, a young 'person' (Eleanor dubbed her) with enormous plaits of hair, a violent red plaid dress, a slight lip, and an appealing manner, joined to incoherent wanderings during her speeches, which were garnished with many personal reminiscences and a great deal of 'I,' and 'my feelings.'

To Eleanor's horror, she took the seat next to her, and began in the usual style—the only woman speaker. Eleanor felt a sudden indignation on behalf of her sex, and with the quieter specimens of it who sat giggling behind, instead of showing that they could do better. (To be continued.)
